ARMORED FORCE BOARD

SINCE publication in this column little more than a year ago of a series of articles on the functioning of the boards of the various Arms and Services, a new board has come into existence, a board in whose hands in large measure rests the selection of equipment and the preparation of means of tactical instruction of the new Armored Force.

The Armored Force Board had its origin in the Infantry and Mechanized Cavalry Boards, both of which were charged among other tasks, with tank development and tactics. However, much of the work of the new Armored Force Board is in new fields, fields as new as the modern concepts of mechanized warfare.

Meeting place of the Armored Force Board is Ft. Knox, Ky., headquarters of the Armored Force and nerve center of the new mechanized army, from which go orders to the five divisions and 15 independent tank battalions of the Armored Force. At Ft. Knox itself are headquarters of the Armored Force, the I Armored Corps, the 1st and 5th Armored Divisions, the Armored Force Replacement Training Center, the Armored Force Board, and the Armored Force School, which recently came in for high praise from Secretary of War Stimson.

Function of the Armored Force Board is to investigate, consider and report on such subjects as may be referred to it by the Chief of the Armored Force, and to originate and submit recommendations for the improvement of the Armored Force, in both tactical and technical matters. Duties of the board, then, range from a study of a new radio for command tanks to preparation of instruction material for employment of hundreds of armored vehicles and their supporting troops in "blitz" war.

Charged with the performance of these duties are nine Regular Army officers, headed by Col. John D. Kelly, Cav., board president, plus such other officers as may be assigned temporarily by the Chief of the Armored Force. The Board is organized into two main sections, the tactical section, now headed by Lt. Col. Isaac C. Walker, Cav., and the test section, under direction of Maj. William P. Withers, Cav. Both of these officers, like the board president, Colonel Kelly, are Cavalrymen.

The tactical section, among other types of projects, is engaged upon the following operations:

(1) Preparation for publication of all training literature and manuals establishing the doctrine and methods of tactical and training procedure in the Armored Force.

(2) Preparation of outlines of extension school courses for Armored Force personnel.

(3) Preparation of training films and film strips for use in instruction in the Armored Force.

(4) Miscellaneous tasks of revision and editing and the review of publications of the American and of foreign armies.

The test section is subdivided into

New Promotion Policy For Nat. Guard Officers

New policies governing the promotion of officers of the National Guard of the United States in active Federal service were promulgated by the War Department this week.

As heretofore, officers on duty with National Guard units may be promoted to fill vacancies in their units.

However, National Guard officers not on duty with their units, but performing Federal service in some other capacity, may upon recommendation of their superior and with approval of higher commanders be promoted to the grade of first lieutenant after three years total commissioned service, to captain after seven years, and to major after 12 years. In computing this service, all service as a commissioned officer in an active and eligible status in any component of the Army of the United States may be counted, whether consecutive or not.

To receive the above promotions, officers must have served six months or more of their current term of extended active duty, and appropriate vacancies or assignments must exist within the Army, War Department overhead, or Corps Area Service Command in which they are serving.

The directive also included instructions concerning the filling of vacancies in National Guard units. It follows in full text:

More Funds for Naval Ordnance are Sought

An additional appropriation of $120,996,000 for Navy ordnance and ordnance stores was asked of Congress this week by President Roosevelt.

The President's request did not enlarge upon the purpose of the request, which follows closely upon the regular 1942 Navy supply bill and the huge supplemental appropriation just voted, but it was indicated at the capitol that part of the funds, at least, are for guns to be placed upon American merchantmen.

It is now illegal to arm merchant vessels, but early pressure to repeal the neutrality act is indicated.

The Navy has a large store of guns available for use on merchant ships, but most of these are three-inch guns removed from Navy fighting ships and replaced with five-inch guns. Five-inch guns are also sought for the merchant vessels. It will be recalled that ships recently constructed by the Maritime Commission were provided with strengthened members and other accessories necessary for the mounting of five-inch guns.

The House Appropriations Committee has begun consideration of the new additional $5,985,000,000 Lend Lease Fund, and when the smaller Navy request would be taken up was not considered this week. However, the new chairman of the Appropriations Committee, Representative Cannon, is also chairman of the subcommittee which considers deficiency estimates. This would indicate that the Navy request either would be considered concurrently with the Lend-Lease items, or would not be taken up at all until the older request is disposed of.

All-Service Pay Group to Recommend Revision

A broad study of the entire pay situation in all the Services affected by the Joint Pay Act of 1922—the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Coast Guard, Coast and Geodetic Survey, and Public Health Service—has been precipitated by the Senate Military Affairs Committee acting under a resolution introduced by Senator Hill, of Ala.

Mr. Hill's resolution calls for "a full and complete study and investigation of the existing laws relating to the pay . . . with a view to determining what adjustments and increases in the pay of such personnel are necessary or desirable in the interests of national defense."

Although the resolution mentions only the pay "of all enlisted personnel of the military and naval services of the United States, including persons inducted for training and service . . . members of Reserve components of the Army of the United States in or subject to active military service, and the United States Coast Guard," Senator Hill said later that the study was intended to cover commissioned and enlisted personnel of all Services.

First action of Congress under the resolution, S. Res. 162, was the dispatch by the Military Affairs Committee of a letter to the War Department, instructing that agency to confer with the other Services and to come back with suggested legislation.

The War Department has lost no time, and has sent to each of the other Services a letter, outlining the action to be sought and requesting designation of representatives empowered to study the pay situation.

Four of the Services under the Joint Pay Act already have selected their representatives to serve on the Joint Pay Committee. They are:

Army—Brig. Gen. Wade H. Haislip, USA, Assistant Chief of Staff, G-1.

Coast Guard—Comdr. L. V. Kielhorn, USCG, member of the Permanent Board, Coast Guard Headquarters.

Coast and Geodetic Survey—Capt. Robert F. Luce, chief of the Division of Personnel and Accounts, and Lt. John A. Bond.

Public Health Service—Dr. Paul M. Stewart, and Dr. L. R. Thompson, both of whom are assistants to the Surgeon General.

It is quite likely that the Navy Department will appoint only one representative for both the Navy and Marine Corps, as was done in the case of the 1938 board. The Navy's delay in naming a member for the board results from the Department's failure to receive the letter from the Secretary of War asking that this be done. The letters, it is stated at the War Department, were sent out Saturday, 20 Sept., but up until yesterday had not been received at the Navy Department, although the other agencies had received theirs. Because of the non-receipt of the official letter, a copy was given informally to a representative of the Navy on Thursday so that action could be initiated pending receipt of the Secretary's letter.

Each member doubtless will be supplied with assistants from their respective services to assist them in the committee.

"Shoot First" Policy for U.S. Navy Receives Widespread Editorial Comment

THIE "shoot first" address made by President Roosevelt on 11 Sept. was the subject of editorials in newspapers throughout the country and in capitals of foreign nations, each of which "explained" to the readers the significance of the President's remarks.

The New York Times sees in the speech a message of hope to those America would help and says, "To the millions now living under the Nazi yoke in the conquered lands of Europe, the President's words have carried new hope of deliverance. To the embattled people of Britain they brought fresh courage. Uneasy neutral nations were reassured and emboldened to stiffen their resistance to Nazi pressure." The Times then adds, "In Rome and Berlin, of course, the speech had a different reception."

The Baltimore, Md., Sun, says, "A final decision has been made by our Government. The people were ready for it and they will make whatever sacrifices are required. Herr Hitler, when he determines what happens next, will be in no doubt on that score." The Sun interjects another idea into its editorial in discussing the effect on Japan and says, "Nor will the other important member of the Axis, of course, we mean Japan, not Italy, doubt the alignment of the American people and their resources behind the policy laid down." Continuing, the Sun says of Japanese reaction to the speech, "It will clear their heads and strengthen their hands to know the depth of American resolution—which marches side by side with a will to peace if peace be possible with safety and honor."

A negative reaction to the speech comes from the New York News, N. Y., which says, "President Roosevelt by this latest act becomes out-and-out war dictator of the United States. . . . He has eliminated Congress, and that part of the Constitution which gives Congress, not the President, the power to declare war." The News explains that "his speech is a virtual declaration of war."

Navy Personnel Announcements

The Navy Department announced this week that Rear Adm. Edward C. Kalbfus, USN, who will be placed on the retired list on 1 Dec., will continue on duty as President, Naval War College, Newport, R. I., and as Commandant, Naval Operating Base, Newport, R. I.

In another announcement the Navy Department stated that Capt. Theodore S. Wilkinson, USN, who has been selected for the grade of Rear Admiral, has been ordered to Naval Operations, Navy Department, for duty as Director of Naval Intelligence, relieving Capt. Alan G. Kirk, USN, whose tour of shore duty has expired, and who is now due for duty at sea.

Political Activities

The War Department announced this week that it has cleared the way for soldiers of Reserve and National Guard components of the Army desiring election or reelection to public office to campaign and hold office if their political activities do not interfere with military duties.

Each request to engage in political activity while serving in the Army of the United States will be considered individually when circumstances justify such action, according to a new War Department ruling.

The War Department recognizes that certain members of the National Guard and Officers' Reserve Corps now on extended active duty are on leave from pub-

The Philadelphia, Pa., Record, lauds the speech and says, "In his message to the American people, President Roosevelt told them what they wanted to hear. This is the forthright leadership which America needs and which the democratic world has prayed for in this zero hour of civilization." The Record concludes its editorial sharply, "American patience with Axis attacks is exhausted. Period. No ifs. No buts. You can't argue with a rattlesnake."

The Christian Science Monitor, Boston, Mass., says, "America has not changed its policy or position; it has only accepted the logic of the situation. American defense never began at the sea shore. Otherwise there would have been no Navy."

The Monitor furthers this theme and says, "The President's order is the plainest recognition so far that American interests and American defense do not begin at the shore."

Illustrating its editorial with a map of the entire war scene, the New York, N. Y., Mirror says, "We believe that the President's message, if it is backed up with action, has won the Battle of the Atlantic for Britain." The Mirror explains that because of U. S. aid in patrolling the seas the British Navy will be relieved of the great task of doing this job alone, and will thus be set free to concentrate on defense and attack rather than defense alone.

Extracts from other editorials tell the same story—of general newspaper support to the President's declaration. The Washington, D. C., Star, "For Americans, a decisive hour is at hand. The time for dissension and bickering has passed." The Philadelphia, Pa., Bulletin, "The United States still does not want war. The President's position is soundly American." The Washington, D. C., Post, "In the light of the record, surely, Mr. Roosevelt has displayed a wisdom in his foreign policy which cannot be gainsaid. Coupled with his patience and his forbearance and his restraint, this wisdom will, we feel sure, be reflected in the overwhelming support of the American people."

lic offices held by them prior to entering upon active duty. Some of these soldiers wish to seek election or reelection during their period of active military service. The War Department will consider exempting such soldiers from compliance with the Army Regulations governing prohibitions on political activity.

RCA Ingenuity Sends Messages

A spectacular display of solar "fireworks" all along the eastern coast last week by the Aurora Borealis, necessitated the use of new scientific methods developed by engineers of the Radio Corporation of America, who by the use of "scientific tricks" were able to offset the powerful magnetic effect of this display.

In order to keep radio messages flowing, New York flashed the traffic on short waves to Buenos Aires where it was automatically made to "turn the elbow" and relayed on to London, thereby dodging the storm over a 12,000 mile detour. This was done as a result of R. C. A. study which determined that a magnetic storm plays most havoc with waves traveling east-west or west-east than with those traveling north-south. The messages made no stop in the Argentine; they merely turned over there and flashed directly across the South Atlantic.

Success was also achieved in reaching Europe by resorting to the long-wave alternators at the RCA station at Rocky Point, L. I., upon which the earth's magnetic currents usually have a minimum effect. Therefore, while the powerful vacuum tubes, generally employed in internation communications on short waves were overpowered at times by magnetic storms, the old alternators of 1918 World War fame—the only ones in service in this country—came to the rescue and kept the transatlantic channels open across the Northern Hemisphere.

Army Music Emphasized

At the same time that the War Department announced that 65 bands, newly organized or soon to be activated, would be issued band instruments in the near future, another announcement stated that a subcommittee of the Joint Army and Navy Committee on Welfare and Recreation has been appointed to advise the Army, Navy, and Marine Corps on all matters pertaining to musical activities within the camps and reservations.

The present procurement schedule for the bands reveals that 20 sets of band instruments will be available by 1 Nov.; 20 by 15 Dec.; 19 by 15 Jan., 1942; and the remaining sets by 15 Feb.

Chairman of the new music subcommittee is Dr. Harold Spivacke, Chief of the Music Division, Library of Congress, Washington, D. C. Dr. Spivacke will have the assistance on his subcommittee of persons whose names are well known in music circles.

Officers in Army of U. S.

President Roosevelt this week approved House Joint Resolution 199, which authorizes the appointment of officers in the Army of the United States without regards to components.

Testifying in support of the measure before the House Military Affairs Committee recently, General George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff, said that the appointment in the Army of the United States would be given graduates of the Officer Candidate Schools, and to certain specialists who did not have a military background justifying a Reserve commission. The War Department, however, has indicated that the just-enacted law will be used to commission all new officers.

Applications for Release

Applications from officers of the reserve components of the Army for release because of undue hardship resulting from their service will be forwarded through channels to the War Department according to a recent circular letter. It was explained that all applications must show positively, by sworn evidence, that the retention of the officer will result in undue hardship to himself, his wife, or other dependents.

While it is expected that this policy will apply especially to company officers, it may also, in exceptional cases, the War Department says, apply to officers of higher rank.

Spanish for Army and Navy

Spanish language classes taught by WPA instructors have been increased by order of WPA Commissioner Howard O. Hunter to include members of the Navy air arm and non-commissioned officers of the Army Air Forces. The WPA has been teaching Spanish to commissioned officers of the Army Air Forces since early in the summer. Commissioner Hunter's order increases Spanish teaching for the armed forces by almost 100 percent. This program has been certified by the War and Navy Departments as essential to national defense.

Approximately 15,000 officers and men of the Army Air Force and 5,000 officers and men of the Navy will study the language spoken in 18 of the Pan-American Republics.

Graduate C of E Course

Brig. Gen. Eugene Reybold, who will become Chief of Engineers on 1 Oct., will be the principal speaker at graduation exercises at the Engineer Officer Candidate School, Ft. Belvoir, Va., to be held today.

Seventy successful candidates of an original group of 97 enlisted men who began the training 12 weeks ago will be given commissions as second lieutenants in the Engineer Corps Reserve.

Shift of Construction to CE Recommended

Following a public hearing this week, at which Under Secretary of War Patterson and General George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff, urged transfer of all Army construction to the Corps of Engineers, the Senate Military Affairs Committee reported the bill S. 1884, with only minor changes in wording.

The legislation will transfer from the Quartermaster Corps to the Corps of Engineers jurisdiction over all Army construction, maintenance of Army construction and control of real estate and licensces.

House action to expedite the bill was seen in the plan of its Military Affairs Committee to call a meeting on 30 Sept. to discuss H. R. 5630, the companion measure to S. 1884. Judge Patterson and General Marshall will be asked to the House hearing, as will William S. Knudsen, director-general of the Office of Production Management; Mr. W. H. Harrison, chief of the Construction Division of OPM, and possibly Brig. Gen. Brehon Somervell, chief of the construction division of the Quartermaster Corps.

Judge Patterson and General Marshall were the only witnesses heard in connection with the bill by the Senate Committee. General Marshall, however, presented a letter from Maj. Gen. Edmund B. Gregory, the Quartermaster General, in which that officer expressed strong opposition to the transfer of functions.

Both witnesses were closely examined by Senator Reynolds, of N. C., committee chairman, and other members of the committee. In response to questions, Judge Patterson declared that the department's bill was not prepared as a result of the disclosures of the Truman Committee, which recommended a new, special corps to handle construction.

General Marshall stated that at first he had favored adoption of the Truman recommendations, but later had been convinced that a transfer of construction to an existing agency, the Corps of Engineers, was more desirable.

General Marshall stated that the transfer of Air Corps and island base construction from the Quartermaster Corps to the Engineer Corps in the middle of the program was accomplished very smoothly. Speaking of the transfer of the remainder of construction, General Marshall said, "There is no doubt whatever in my mind that this is the thing to do."

Under Secretary Patterson incorporated in his testimony a letter from Mr. Harrison, of the Office of Production Management, in which that official declared that both he and Mr. Knudsen would be unable to testify, but that "Knudsen has directed me to advise you that he is in accord with the bill. I also am in accord."

Judge Patterson emphasized that introduction of the legislation could not be interpreted as a disparagement of the Construction Division of the Quartermaster Corps. In response to a question, he indicated that both the Corps of Engineers and the Quartermaster Corps were competent, but the pressing need was to have a single agency in charge of all construction.

This was touched upon later in the committee's report, which stated:

"The Corps of Engineers in normal times has a well-established, large, active organization for construction work, due to the many

The Journal Salutes

This week the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL salutes:

projects of a civilian character which they have directed and carried to completion. In war or in time of national emergency it requires no great effort to turn that organization to the task of building what may be needed for the Army.

The Quartermaster Corps, on the other hand, has little to do in the way of construction in normal times, and its organization is necessarily not on a large scale. With the coming of the emergency it has to build its organization from the grass roots."

Judge Patterson prefaced his remarks by the statement that the bill was "introduced at my instance after careful study on my part and thorough discussion with those concerned in the construction program of the War Department. It has the approval of the Chief of Staff, the Secretary of War and the President."

The Under Secretary also pointed out that, following the World War, General Peyton C. March, Chief of Staff, urged transfer of construction to the engineers, and a special House investigating committee recommended that transfer.

Judge Patterson also cited a statement made by General Malin Craig in his 1939 annual report:

"It is my opinion that full use is not being made of the technical skill and experience of the Corps of Engineers in the matter of new construction in the Army. The Quartermaster Corps, now charged with construction, has a task of first magnitude to perform in the sup-pilation and digestion of the necessary facts and figures. General Haas will be assisted by Col. Oscar B. Abbott, and other officers in the G-1 section of the General Staff, of which he is head.

Joint Pay Study

There is some reason to believe that an effort will be made to have the board recommend a flat percentage increase for commissioned officers, ten per cent having been mentioned as a likely figure. Other recommendations likely will be made such as assurance that officers always will receive at least the pay of the grade in which they are serving and removal of the limitation on total pay and allowances payable to officers below the grade of general officer or flag officer.

Officials at the Capitol this week stated that they expected to receive drafts of legislation from the Services within the next two weeks or so. It is considered that much of the basic work already has been covered by the Interdepartmental Pay Board of 1938, whose work came to nothing because the Navy disagreed with the other Services on the method to be used in computing commissioned pay schedules. The Navy demanded pay for rank, while the other services favored a pay schedule based on length of service.

Since the Army now bases its rank on length of service up to grade of colonel, a unified report is much more likely to be submitted than was possible in 1938. The Services, moreover, are more likely to be motivated by a spirit of compromise since the failure to get together in 1938 was largely responsible for the failure of all the Services to receive increases.

The Senate is not the only agency interested in Service pay, and the Senate resolution is not the only piece of pending legislation designed to adjust pay schedules upward. A House Military Affairs Committee sub-committee, headed by Representative Faddis, of Pa., has had a similar study in hand for some months, acting under a House resolution. Illness, however, has handicapped this committee, five of its six members, including its chairman, having been ill at various times, and little work has been done.

Representative Faddis, moreover, is not too ardent a supporter of increased pay. His reaction to legislation, H. R. 4779, which would authorize pay of their temporary grades for Regular Army officers was, "They must take the bitter with the sweet."

There are pending in both the House and Senate bills to authorize pay of their temporary grades for Regular Army officers. The House bill has been pending for several months, and probably even the most ardent proponents of the measure could not criticize failure of the House-Military Committee to act, since the committee has been extremely busy with administration measures. With the work of Congress for this year to all purposes complete, but with Congress certain to stay in session until January in view of the international situation, the committee now will have time to consider personnel bills.

The Senate pay-for-grade bill was introduced only late last month, but prospects for early enactment appear good. Its author was Senator Reynolds, of N. C., powerful chairman of the Senate Military Affairs Committee. Senator Reynolds stated this week that he would bring the bill before his committee early in October, upon the return of Senator Hill. Senator Downey, of Calif., who is sponsor of a bill to increase all enlisted pay by $30 a month, said this week that he favored the officers' pay measure.

Another measure pending in Congress is H. R. 4343, which would advance first sergeants of the Army and Marine Corps to the first pay grade. This bill was introduced 14 April by Representative Sparkman, whose office stated this week that he would in a few days take up with Military Affairs Committee Chairman May the matter of bringing up his bill before the committee.

ducted National Guard Units, are rescinded.

"^a. Vacancies in National Guard units.

"a. To insure that all National Guard units are maintained at Table of Organization commissioned strength, commanders concerned will initiate prompt action to fill vacancies as they occur.

"b. Until otherwise directed by the War Department, and except as indicated in subparagraph c and d just below, vacancies in National Guard units for commissioned officers in grades above the lowest, may be filled to the extent practicable by the assignment and temporary promotion (paragraph three, below) of qualified personnel inducted from the National Guard of the United States.

"c. Vacancies in National Guard units in grades above the lowest, for which qualified officers are not available within the division or separate unit concerned, and all vacancies in lowest grades, will be filled by Army commanders as follows:

"(1) By the transfer of eligible and qualified officers already under their assignment jurisdiction. All officers now with Regular Army units in excess of the fifteen per cent over-strength now authorized for such units will be utilized before the sources indicated in subparagraph three below are called upon.

"(2) By requisition upon The Adjutant General for the assignment of Regular Army officers of proper grade and branch, when required.

"(3) (a) By requisition upon the commander of the corps area in which the unit is stationed for the additional officers of proper grade and branch required to fill vacancies remaining after utilization of the sources indicated above. Corps area commanders will fill such requisitions from the sources indicated in columns marked 'Officer Candidate Schools' and 'Service Schools' of Inclosure No. 2 of War Department letter dated 12 July 1941, (A.G. 320.2) (7-1-41)OP-A-M, Subject: 'Consolidated Allotment of Officers for Duty with Regular Army Troop Units of the Field Forces Stationed in the Continental United States, Fiscal Year, 1942.' In the assignment of Reserve officers from the two sources indicated, National Guard units will take priority over Regular Army units.

"(b) If the two sources indicated in subparagraph (a) just above are inadequate to completely fill requisitions for National Guard units, the corps area commander will make requisition upon the commander of the corps area in which the unit concerned originated for the necessary number of Reserve officers of proper grade and branch.

"(4) Vacancies in Regular Army units created by any of the above transfers will be filled in accordance with established procedure.

"d. If an Army commander transfers an officer, other than a general officer, from a National Guard unit to another unit or position under his command, the vacancy thus created may be filled by the Army commander by the assignment of any officer of like grade and branch already under his assignment jurisdiction who is fully qualified and eligible for duty with troop units, or he may authorize such vacancy to be filled by the division or separate unit commander concerned as provided in subparagraph b, just above.

Construction to CE

ply and maintenance of troops in the field and in garrison. I believe the Corps of Engineers should be utilized to relieve that corps of the additional responsibility for new construction."

Expressing opposition to the proposed transfer, Maj. Gen. E. B. Gregory, the Quartermaster General, told General Marshall that he had the best interests of the War Department at heart in voicing his disapproval, and felt that "the reasons given for the proposed change do not stand scrutiny."

General Gregory pointed out that the proposed transfer was discussed at length after the World War. Calling attention to the housing program just completed, he said, "I am sure, in view of the accomplishment which made it possible for the Army to move a large number of men in the cantonments according to schedule, the submission of the bill at this time will have a rather unfortunate effect upon the morale of the Quartermaster officers who will feel that the transfer is being made because of the manner in which the work was being performed rather than for other considerations."

Turning to the argument that the Engineer Corps, with its river and harbor work, has in peacetime a larger construction program than the Quartermaster Corps, General Gregory said:

"It is true that in general the appropriations for rivers and harbors over the past 20 years have been somewhat larger than the appropriations for new construction for housing the Army. Though, if the housing for the CCC were included, the Quartermaster expenditures for construction would be larger than those of the Engineer Corps for the past ten years. . . . Neither the peace-time construction of the Engineer Corps or the Quartermaster Corps is comparable to the load of construction in an emergency. . . . The Quartermaster Corps and the Engineer Corps must recruit both trained military and civilian personnel for emergency construction activities. Both organizations would have to be expanded enormously as their peace-time organizations would not be adequate to handle the war-time load."

"While river and harbor work certainly require a high degree of engineering skill, it is my understanding that the officers who have been engaged in this class of work during time of peace are invariably the first to be selected to command combat organizations in time of war. The training of combat engineering forces has very little in common with the construction work involved in the Zone of the Interior and both the Engineer Corps and the Army as a whole would suffer by any attempt to combine these two inherently different activities. There are many problems of procurement and distribution of supplies which are part of the normal Quartermaster activities which are certainly comparable to the many problems involved in construction in the Zone of the Interior."

Turning to maintenance, the Quartermaster General stated it was "intimately involved with the functions of the Quartermaster Corps at all military posts. . . . In short, the Quartermaster Corps is already on the job. It is in intimate touch with every phase of Army life. There is a Quartermaster officer wherever a group of soldiers can be found. The Engineer Corps, on the other hand, handles specialized work usually completely aloof from the rest of the Army and entirely out of touch with the day to day life of military organizations."

The Quartermaster Corps, concluded General Gregory, "has completed much of the construction for our greatly expanded army and has concluded the basic work necessary for any future construction program. Having done this, the Quartermaster Corps has paved the way for better, faster, more efficient, and more economical operation henceforth."

Before closing the hearings, Chairman Reynolds read a telegram from Senator Truman, chairman of the special committee investigating camp construction, in which Mr. Truman said: "Recommend that Senate bill 1884 be favorably reported. It does not meet completely the recommendations of the special committee on page 35 of camp report but it is a step in the right direction."

Text of the bill as reported follows:
Be it enacted, etc.: That the Chief of Engineers, under the authority of the Secretary of War, is hereby charged, in addition to other duties imposed upon him by law, with the direction of all work pertaining to the construction, maintenance, and repair of buildings, structures, and utilities for the Army; with the acquisition of all real estate and the issuance of licenses in connection with Government reservations; and with the operation of water, gas, electric and sewer utilities: Provided, that utilities pertaining exclusively to any branch of the Army may be operated by such branch.

Sec. 2. All funds, property, and records pertaining to the activities described in section 1, and all civilian personnel engaged solely thereon, shall be transferred to the jurisdiction of the Chief of Engineers.

Sec. 3. All laws and parts of laws which are inconsistent herewith or in conflict with the provisions hereof are hereby repealed.

General Schley Retires

Maj. Gen Julian L. Schley, who in his capacity as Chief of Engineers has supervised and directed an expansion of the Engineer Corps by more than 1,000 per cent, will retire Sept. 30. On his own application after 42 years' service. He will be succeeded as Chief of Engineers by Brig. Gen. Eugene Reybold.

General Schley

on duty with Engineer troops in the Philippine Islands. In 1904 he returned to the States and was assigned at Ft. Leavenworth, Kans., where he served until 1905 when he was sent with U. S. Army of Occupation in Cuba (part of time Assistant to the Chief Engineer of that Army). Later he took a post graduate course in military engineering at Washington Barracks, D. C., from which he was graduated in 1909. He then served successively as assistant to the Engineer Commissioner of the District of Columbia; Executive Officer, Public Utilities Commission of the District of Columbia; in charge of U. S. Engineer District at New Orleans, La., where he was stationed until 1917.

In the World War, General Schley commanded the 307th Engineer Regiment and served as engineer of the 82nd Division during the period of organization and training at Camp Gordon, Ga., and in the American Expeditionary Force in France, 1917-1918. In 1918 he was made chief engineer of the 5th Army Corps. He was Director of Purchase in the Purchase, Storage and Traffic Division of the War Department General Staff and on duty with the War Department Claims Board from 1919 to 1921. From 1921 to 1922 he was in charge of the U. S. Engineer District at Nashville, Tenn. He was then assigned as Director of Department of Military Engineering and Assistant Commandant of the Engineer School, Ft. Humphreys, Va., 1922 to 1924.

From 1924 to 1928 General Schley was in charge of the U. S. Engineer District at Galveston, Tex. He was then assigned as Engineer of Maintenance of the Panama Canal until 1932 when he became Governor of the Panama Canal and President and Director of the Panama Railroad Company (1932-1936). He was then assigned as Commandant of the Engineer School, Ft. Belvoir, Va., and served in that capacity until he was made Chief of Engineers in 1937.

General Kromer to Norwich

In announcing to cadets that Maj. Gen. Leon B. Kromer, USA-Ret., former Chief of Cavalry, had accepted the position of Commandant of Norwich University, President John M. Thomas said: "It is a high tribute to Norwich University that a man of the rank and standing of General Kromer is willing to become a member of our staff. I congratulate the cadet officers that they are to have the privilege of serving under a man of the calibre and experience of General Kromer, and I congratulate heartily every member of the corps on the opportunity of coming under his influence. I expect he will be a strict disciplinarian, but I think he will give his strength chiefly to constructive effort in building manhood and imbuing the corps with a spirit that will remove the occasion of penalties as much as possible. He will be a real friend of every cadet, and he will help greatly to build up and sustain the principles and ideals of manhood for which Norwich stands."

THE UNITED STATES NAVY and MARINE CORPS

Naval Port Director's Staff

Frank Zotti, Jr., former middleweight champion of the United States Naval Academy, and captain of the academy's boxing team, returned to active duty in the Navy on 23 Sept. With the rank of Lieutenant he has been assigned to the staff of Capt. F. G. Reinicke, USN-Ret., the Naval Director, Port of New York, as Assistant Procurement and Repair Officer.

Lieutenant Zotti was graduated from the Naval Academy with the class of 1922. When the Navy that year reduced the fleet and personnel following the disarmament agreement, Lieutenant Zotti resigned his commission, entering the civilian engineering field.

After eight years of engineering activities he became associated with the United Drydock and Shipbuilding Company, of New York, first in the capacity of industrial engineer, and later as manager of the subsidiary steel plate fabricating plant. Later Lieutenant Zotti founded the Steel and Alloy Tank Company, of Newark, of which he is now President.

The Navy also recalled to active service an officer who has the unusual distinction of having served in all four military branches of the United States. He is George F. Gaynor, Ensign, USNR. Ensign Gaynor has been assigned to the communication staff of Captain Reinicke.

Ensign Gaynor, who is forty, enlisted in the 107th Infantry, 27th Division, at the age of 16, serving in France and Belgium during the World War. In 1921 he enlisted in the United States Marine Corps, serving part time in Santo Domingo, as a radioman. On 2 Feb. 1925 he enlisted as a Radioman, third class, in the United States Coast Guard, serving on the Cutter Mojave. After further experience with commercial radio firms he was, on 11 Feb. 1937, commissioned as Ensign in the United States Naval Reserve.

Sec. Knox Speaks At Launching

"Our Army must be used wherever and whenever it is needed." These words highlighted a speech delivered by Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox at Quincy, Mass., this week at ceremonies following the launching of the 35,000-ton battleship Massachusetts, built at a cost of 70 million dollars. Even as the Massachusetts slid down the ways, a huge overhead crane started to lay the keel of a new cruiser, the USS Flint.

Speaking extemporaneously to a crowd of 50,000 persons, Secretary Knox demanded immediate repeal of the Neutrality Act, asserting that "we must have done with that type of thinking that argues that our Army must be circumscribed in its action in defending America."

Secretary Knox told the huge audience that the Massachusetts, completed seven months ahead of schedule, would be equipped with nine 16-inch guns, and that five similar ships built or building would carry the "heaviest guns afloat."

The Massachusetts is designed to steam in excess of 27 knots and will develop approximately 115,000 horsepower. Her main battery consists of nine 16-inch guns mounted in three turrets. The vessel, 704 feet long and with a beam of 108 feet, will also carry when completed a powerful battery of five inch weapons as well as others of smaller calibre.

Declaring that the Massachusetts must be ready to aid her sister ships, the Washington and the North Carolina, "to keep the sea lanes clear, to keep war as far away from our shores as possible," Secretary Knox further stated that "Down to the water's edge and beyond the edge, we must keep the new menace to freedom at bay. The time is now for all of us," he continued, "to face facts which no longer can be ignored." Asserting himself in positive terms, the Secretary said, "The time has come to do away with the Neutrality Law. We can waste no time in repealing that law. It must be repealed."

Turning to the war situation in Russia, Secretary Knox said, "Reports of the fighting in Russia . . . should make America realize that the situation is dire and grave. The time has come for Americans to further realize that the fighting in Russia is keeping the dictator from our shore."

Mrs. Charles F. Adams, wife of a former Secretary of the Navy, gave the signal for the release of the chocks and broke a bottle of champagne on the prow of the ship, which glided down the ways into the Fore River. There a fleet of tugs pushed the huge vessel to outfitting yards.

Sailors Complimented

The crews from the cruisers USS Northampton and USS Salt Lake City, which visited Australia early in August, have been complimented in a business letter from an Australian firm to the Banton Corp., New York, N. Y. Davis Addis, Jr., member of the firm of Addis Bros., Pty., Ltd., Brisbane, Australia, wrote in a post script, "Your sailors of the 'Northampton' and 'Salt Lake City' are enjoying their visit here. Send some more."

Receives Commendation

Chief Pharmacist's Mate Harry Wilson Combs, Jr., has been commended by the Bureau of Navigation for editing and compiling a pamphlet "Instruction Notes for Aviation Medicine Technicians" and for interest manifest in instruction of Aviation Medicine Technicians of the Navy. Combs is on duty at the Naval Reserve Aviation Base, Anacostia, Washington, D. C.

U. S. COAST GUARD

REAR Admiral Russell R. Waesche, commandant U. S. Coast Guard, announced this week that a Personnel Board would be convened at Headquarters, Washington, D. C., on 27 Oct., to establish a policy and recommend the temporary promotion of certain commanders to captains and certain warrant officers to temporary commissions. Representatives from the nine largest and oldest Coast Guard districts will serve on the board, president of which will be Capt. William H. Munter, commander of the Seattle District. Other members of the board and the districts they represent are Capts. Ralph W. Dempwolf, New York; James L. Ahearn, New Orleans; Stanley V. Parker, San Francisco; Michael J. Ryan, Jacksonville; Charles G. Roemer, Boston; and Comdr. Russell L. Lucas, Norfolk; Gordon W. MacLane, Chicago, and Ephraim Zoole, Cleveland.

Coast Guard officials revealed this week that a study is now being made of methods to provide stricter security in American harbors. As the foreign situation becomes increasingly tense, the task of protecting harbors takes on added significance, officials explain. It is assumed that as a result of this study, the Coast Guard will release new regulations and restrictions in the use of American harbors.

The 13 Sept. report of the sale of Defense Bonds and Stamps among Coast Guard personnel states that $53,176 has been received from actual sales, that $30,337 has been pledged, that there are in all 3,138 pledges, and that 59.3 per cent of Coast Guard personnel at Headquarters and in the field are participating in the campaign, directed by the Public Relations Branch at Coast Guard Headquarters.

No decision has as yet been made by Coast Guard officials concerning the placing of contracts for thirteen 254-foot cutters already authorized. American shipyards, rapidly approaching capacity production, did not submit bids in answer to an original Coast Guard advertisement for construction of these vessels. Whether there will be other advertisements for bids is a matter the Coast Guard has not yet decided.

On the Hill

The House Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries was scheduled to begin hearings this week on H. R. 5509, a bill introduced by Representative Bland, of Va., which authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to requisition or purchase motorboats, yachts, and similar vessels for Coast Guard use, during a period of national emergency declared by the President. A provision of the bill states that fair compensation must be paid owners for any vessels that might be taken over for Coast Guard use.

The House Appropriations Committee will soon begin hearings on the supplemental Coast Guard appropriation for 1942. Coast Guard officials will appear before the committee as soon as Lease hearings are concluded, probably next week.

The Senate this week received the nominations of Lt. Frank K. Johnson, USCG, to be a lieutenant commander, to rank from 26 July 1941; Lt. (jg) William B. Ellis, USCG, to be a lieutenant to rank from 1 Aug. 1941; and Lt. (jg) John W. MacIntosh, Jr., USCG, to be a lieutenant, to rank from 5 Aug. 1941.

Successfully opening its 1941 gridiron schedule, the Coast Guard Academy eleven last Saturday, 20 Sept., routed the Rhode Island State grididers, 38-0. The Cadets, who substituted freely throughout the game, scored 19 points in the first quarter, 6 in the second, 0 in the third, and tallied 13 points in the last period. Nick Carter, halfback, led the scoring with two touchdowns, while Shepard, Thompson, Emerson, and Tibbits each scored once. Capt. John Thompson, quarterback, converted twice after touchdowns.

The Connecticut Valley Colleges Conference on Physical Education was held at the Coast Guard Academy, New London, Conn., on Sunday, 21 Sept. The meeting was held to determine the general policies of the Physical Education courses given in the member colleges, and to discuss eligibility rules for participation in sports and athletics programs.

Operations

Coast Guard Headquarters this week released the number of units now operating as part of the Navy. These include the entire Honolulu District, 19 cutters, 1 tug, 1 repair depot, 1 radio station, 9 light stations, and 1 cutter, transferred without Coast Guard personnel.

The new 73-foot tender class cutter Oleander being built at the Jeffersonville Machine and Boat Co. Plant, Jeffersonville, Ind., is rapidly nearing completion. Underway trials have already been conducted by the vessel, whose permanent station will be Sewickley, Pa.

Coast Guard officials last week accepted the second of the forty 83-foot cutters now being built by the Wheeler Shipyard Inc., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Admiral Ghormley Promoted

The Navy Department announced last week that at the direction of President Roosevelt, Rear Adm. Robert L. Ghormley, USN, has been advanced to the rank of vice admiral, while serving as Special Naval Observer at the American Embassy, London.

The advancement was made under the Act of Congress dated 17 July, 1941, which empowers the President to increase to not more than nine the number of officers serving in the rank of vice admiral, the advancement in rank to be for the period in which they are serving in special posts.

Sponsor New Troop Carrier

Miss Barbara Eda Funston, 3127 Washington Street, San Francisco, Calif., daughter of the late Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Frederick Funston, has been invited by the War Department to act as sponsor for the new United States Army Transport, the USAT Frederick Funston, at its launching at Tacoma, Wash., 27 Sept.

"The world is governed less by sympathy than by reason and force."—MILLARD FILLMORE

OUR PRIORITY LIST

1. Legislative assurance, now, that our land, sea, and air forces will be maintained at such strengths as may be determined by the War Department General Staff and the General Board of the Navy to be necessary to guard the nation and its interests against any enemy or combination of enemies.
2. Upward revision of pay schedules for commissioned, warrant and enlisted personnel, active and retired; all temporarily promoted officers to receive pay of grade in which serving.
3. A long range study by the General Board of the Navy to the end that an equitable and just system of promotion for the line and staff of the Navy and Marine Corps be enacted into law.
4. Revision of pension laws to assure service widows a living income.
5. Compensation for service personnel who use privately owned automobiles on government business.

THERE are aspects of the findings of the Tarrant Court of Inquiry into the loss of the O-9, which are so conflicting as not to be dismissed with the flat conclusion that its cause cannot be determined. Here was a submarine which had been laid up 13 years, which, according to the report, had received an extensive overhaul at the Philadelphia Navy Yard, which had 1 officer and 12 enlisted men officially qualified for submarine duty out of a crew of 33, and which engaged in the fatal deep submergence test after 21 days of operations at sea. The Court found the material condition of the vessel was "satisfactory" for the prescribed test, that the personnel was "sufficiently" trained for it, but that the visibility conditions were such that accurate navigational fixes were not practicable. Let us compare these findings with those rendered by a like Court, also presided over by Admiral Tarrant, in the case of the unfortunate Squalus, which sank in the same area, and the salvage of which was truly described as an outstanding accomplishment. The Court reported the officers and crew of the Squalus "well trained and efficient" and her diving stations manned by a specially detailed trial crew, selected from the whole crew because of known ability and former experience in submarines. Newly commissioned, she had operated at sea over a period of about 11 days as against the O-9's 21, and had made eighteen dives prior to the last one, as against "at least eight dives" by her successor in disaster. Mr. Edison, then Secretary of the Navy, added some findings of his own to those of the Tarrant Court, which called attention to the lack of emphasis the Navy training had placed upon timely closing of important hull valves. To sum up the conclusions from these comparisons, it is clear that the O-9 was an old craft that had been reconditioned, that her second officer, belonging to the Reserves, had just graduated from the Submarine School, that two-thirds of her personnel had not had any submarine experience, and that accurate navigational fixes at the time of the submergence test were not practicable. In the light of these circumstances, the questions naturally arise why such a small quota of qualified submarine men was assigned to the O-9, why, as in the case of the Squalus, a specially detailed trial was not provided, and whether the overhaul was thorough. The answers to these questions may appear in the testimony, and if so, they should be given publicity so that popular concern about the O-9 type may be alleviated, and the morale of the under sea service maintained.

IF Senator Hill's resolution looking toward a comprehensive study of service pay is to bear fruit, the Joint Service Pay Committee which is now being organized must present a unanimous report with recommendations which will have the backing of all the Departments concerned. It is recalled that the Interdepartmental Pay Committee of 1938 spent more than six months compiling a most exhaustive study of the entire pay situation and making recommendations with suggested legislation. However, the work came to naught largely because the board did not present a united front, the Navy representative, speaking on behalf of the Navy and Marine Corps, disagreeing with the other members and filing a minority report. In his letter asking that the board be set up, Chairman Reynolds of the Senate Military Affairs Committee specifies that he wants a draft of a bill to be arrived at by "concert of action" by representatives of the various uniformed services. It is this "concert of action" which is necessary for the success of this latest pay movement.

As to the need for an overhauling of the pay schedules, there is no doubt. The ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL has repeatedly called attention to the inadequacy of existing schedules and the inequalities that have arisen in their application. This is particularly true in respect to those many instances where officers of the Regular Army are denied the pay of the higher grades in which they are serving as the result of the temporary promotion law. Included in the board's recommendations should be one to compensate service personnel who use their privately owned automobiles on government business. The inadequacy of the schedules is being further aggravated by the rising cost of living and the increased expenses to which personnel are being put by virtue of lack of quarters for families at most of the new stations. A further burden will be the imposition of the new income taxes under which service personnel will refund sizeable portions of their pay to their employer—the government. A large part of the fact finding job—the spade work—has been done by the 1938 board. The new board should be able to agree quickly on a plan which will benefit all personnel.

How True!

Apropos the current widespread separation of families involved in the training activities of the Army, a group of Army children were playing at Fort Sam Houston, when one of them asked: "What's maneuvers?" Up spoke little Miss Judith, aged three, and explained: "Maneuvers is where they keep the Daddies!"

The sad fate of Nat, subject of the 13 Sept. Limerick, has been best completed by Capt. "REG," whose closing line follows:

There was once a soldier named Nat,
Who was rough, tough, and fat,
One day he did scold,
A soldier too bold,
Who promptly did give him a bat.

Immediately following an announcement by the War Department last week that the Army would experiment with collapsible bicycles, Miss "RAB" submitted the following Limerick, completion of which will appear in the 11 Oct. issue.

The Army will soon carry bikes in a plane,
For effective troop use on enemy terrain,
There are those who do say,
It will be an ill-fated day,

ASK THE JOURNAL

SEND your queries to the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL QUESTION EDITOR and an answer will be given in this column as soon as possible after receipt.

A Subscriber—Pay of retired warrant officers will not be affected by the recent warrant officer legislation. The new law does not raise pay of warrant officers; it merely increases authorized number of warrant officers, provides for a grade of chief warrant officer, provides pay for such a grade, and authorizes temporary appointments.

W. A. D.—A proven case of dependency or disability is about the only way a Regular Army enlisted man can obtain a discharge at this time. Since your commanding officers must rule on the dependency case, it is advised you take up the matter with them.

H. T. C.—The United States has had four Generals of the Armies: Grant, Sherman, Sheridan and Pershing. There have been eight full generals: Washington, Pershing, Tasker H. Bliss, Peyton C. March, Charles P. Summerall, Douglas MacArthur, Malin Craig and George C. Marshall.

The British officer's gun jammed and he fired no shots. Lt. Fickel, who went up with Lt. Henry H. Arnold, as pilot, fired ten times at the target but failed to make a hit.

NAVAL RADIOMEN

CREI Spare-Time Technical Training helps Alert Naval Radiomen prepare for Higher Ratings by Increasing their Knowledge of Radio Materiel and hence their Efficiency and Individual Worth to Naval Communications.

Admirable—and a credit to the U. S. Navy—are the high calibre men who do not "sit and wait" for routine promotions, but devote their own spare time and money to become better radiomen. More than 1500 men throughout the naval service are enrolled now for CREI courses in Radio Materiel for additional help in preparing for rating examinations. CREI has proved to be a "helpful partner" . . . by enabling such men successfully to make their higher ratings and to prepare for Bellevue.

The success of CREI men who have spent their spare time in preparation for promotion should prove an incentive to others to investigate thoroughly the opportunities that this advanced training makes possible. CREI is interested in any serious-minded radioman—from striker to radio electrician—who realizes the value of a planned program of technical training . . . and we point with pride and as proof to the many Naval Radiomen who are now enjoying the benefits of CREI training in Practical Radio Engineering.

Your recommendation of the CREI home study courses to adaptable Naval Radiomen may be the means of starting them on the road to an even greater, more usable knowledge of radio materiel. May we send you our booklet and complete information for your files?

PICTURE OF YOU INHALING

Every smoker does, sometimes—increase exposure to irritation. But consider! Eminent doctors report—

On comparing—the irritant quality in the smoke of the four other leading brands was found to average more than THREE TIMES that of the strikingly contrasted Philip Morris . . . and the irritation LASTS MORE THAN FIVE TIMES AS LONG!

Now—enjoy complete smoking pleasure...with never a worry about throat irritation!

SERVICE NEWS AND GOSSIP

Foreign Affairs—The drive for the repeal of the Neutrality law, which is necessary to implementation of the President's policy to destroy Nazism, was accelerated this week as a result of the sinking of the Panama registered, but American owned, Pink Star by a submarine, which picked her out of a Canadian convoy off Iceland. Denouncing Nazi pirates, and asserting that the way to deal with them is by shooting or capture, the President disclosed at a Press conference, that he and his advisers are considering whether he shall recommend the repeal of the entire law, or only some of its provisions, among which is that forbidding the installation of guns and Navy crews on ships flying the American flag. That his disposition, as well as that of his Cabinet members, is for the repeal of the entire law, is shown by declarations in speeches the latter have made.

In conformity with his announcement at the American Legion Convention last week that he had given orders to the Navy to capture or destroy Axis submarines and raiders, Secretary Knox urged at the launching of the Battleship Massachusetts at Boston, that the law be repealed and that the Army be used "where it is needed and when it is needed." Secretary Hull, in an official statement, thought the law should be discarded. Attorney General Biddle supported in California, the Navy's shooting orders, and pointed out they were no different from those issued by the McKinley Administration under which an expeditionary force marched to Peking during the Boxer uprising. He also said significantly: "If you were to press me for a distillation of principle from the full harvest of our national experience, I would say that the magnitude of the threatened disaster is the measure of the President's power and duty to take steps to avert it." Secretary Wickard, speaking at Chicago, flatly stated: "This is our war!" Assistant Secretary of War McCloy argued in Michigan that "we can no more ignore this war than a man can ignore an elephant in his parlor."

In the light of these Administration assertions, and the sinking of American ships that have occurred, it follows that the neutrality law devised, according to its caption, "to preserve the neutrality and peace of the United States, and secure the safety of its citizens and their interests," conflicts with the Lend-Lease Law and its enforcement by the President. Although Senator Norris of Nebraska opines that the repeal of the law would mean war, and doubts that Congress would approve a declaration of war, the fact remains that the sentiment at the Capitol has strongly turned to support of the President, and that his recommendation to be made next week, will be adopted. An indication of this truth was furnished by Representative Dirksen, one of the leading Republicans in the House, who, after consulting his Minority colleagues, stated that "to disavow or oppose the President's policy of patrolling the waters deemed necessary for our defense and for the maintenance of the freedom of the seas, could only weaken his position, imperil our prestige, and imperil the nation." Further confirmation of the President's control of Congress is shown by the prospect that that body will appropriate without serious opposition, the additional $6 billions required for Lend-Lease, and will not forbid the use of the money for the acquisition and transfer of supplies to Russia.

The Administration feels that exclusion of Russia from the benefits of this appropriation would have a serious effect in Moscow. The efforts of both Great Britain and ourselves are directed toward keeping the Soviet Union in the war. The frightful losses its Armies have suffered, and the imperative need of replacing the equipment destroyed or captured, have been impressed on Washington and London by Stalin, and he has been assured that as quickly as possible aid will be furnished to him. Sitting in Moscow at this moment is the Tripartite Supply Commission, which is ascertaining Russian requirements, and forwarding its conclusions to the Democracies. There is a report that General Wavell is moving British troops to the Caucasus, so as to relieve the Soviets of the necessity of guarding that valuable oil region. From information received from Russia, it appears to be the intention of the Government to fight on, but it is recognized that Hitler may attempt to make peace, and unless Stalin be assured he will receive actual support promptly, he might be inclined to accept a reasonable proposal.

Besides promising Lend-Lease and troop aid, measures are being taken to induce Finland to refuse to advance into Russia beyond the boundary prior to their 1939 war. Both the United States and Great Britain have impressed upon the Helsinki Government that such an advance would deprive her of their friendly interest. Reports of Bulgaria's active participation in the Russian campaign are denied by her Prime Minister, which is agreeable news, but the relations of that government with the Soviet Union are badly strained, and the expectation prevails that it will join the Axis. Such action would impose an additional threat on Turkey. The Ankara Ministry to date is refusing to permit Axis or Bulgarian warships to pass through the Dardanelles, but its situation is difficult. At this juncture, it is impossible to say whether it will join the Axis or the Allies, but the time of decision is near. To protect Russia's Asian flank as well as India, the British Government is demanding that Afghanistan follow the example of Iraq and Iran, and expel German agents. Should it refuse to do so, the country probably will be occupied.

Prime Minister Konoye and President Roosevelt are continuing to exchange letters in an effort to adjust the relations of their respective countries. Reports are current that Japan is strengthening her forces in Manchukuo and along the Siberian frontier. This constitutes a demonstration which compels the Soviet Government to retain considerable forces in Siberia, and thus is helpful to Germany. It continues to be the view in Washington that the Japanese will await the result in Russia before deciding finally whether to defy the Axis or the United States and Britain.

The developments of the week in Latin-America were the stern measures taken by the Argentine Government against the Fascists, troop occupation of all airports in the country to prevent their seizure by a Nazi conspiracy, and military precautions in provinces with large German population, and the riot of munition workers upon the palace of the President of Mexico, said to have been Communist inspired, in which a number were killed and wounded. The incidents are noteworthy because they show continuing Axis activity, but their effect has been to incline the Pan-American Governments toward the viewpoint expressed by President Roosevelt.

Armored Force—Fifty members of Britain's Royal Armored Corps have arrived at Ft. Knox, Ky., for a period of instruction in the operation of American tanks, it was announced this week. These British soldiers, eight of which are captains and the remainder non-commissioned officers, will attend regular course of instruction along with members of the Army's Armored Force. Upon completion of studies, they will return to England as instructors.

Ground-breaking ceremonies were held last Saturday, 20 Sept., inaugurating the construction of Camp Chaffee, Armored Division cantonment to be erected near Ft. Smith, Ark. Col. W. D. Styer, Deputy Chief of the Construction Division, Office of the Quartermaster General, made the main address and represented Maj. Gen. Edmund B. Gregory, Quartermaster General, and Brig. Gen. Breton B. Somervell, Chief of the Construction Division. Others taking part in the exercises were Lt. Col. Ralph G. Richards, Construction Quartermaster for Zone 7; Maj. Otto C. Person, Construction Quartermaster in charge of the Camp Chaffee project.

Camp Chaffee is slated to become the home of the 6th Armored Division and was named in honor of the late Maj. Gen. Adna R. Chaffee, former Commander of the 1st Armored Corps and Chief of the Armored Forces of the Army.

Navy's Shore Program—The Navy Department this week released figures which indicate the speed with which the building of bases and other shore establishments is being accomplished. Of a total of $463,234,863.34 available for contract undertakings during the fiscal year 1942, the amount of $265,587,640.34 has been covered in contracts to 13 Sept., further explanation revealing that of the total amount, the sum of $294,528,500 did not become available until 25 Aug.

A comparison of the nation's present undertaking in Naval Defense may be gained by comparing peak period activities of 1917-18 with those of the present emergency. Contracts awarded through the Bureau of Yards and Docks from 1 July, 1917, to 30 June, 1918, totaled $89,002,725, while in the month of July this year alone $60,481,000 worth of contracted work was paid for. Thus, the contract work for six weeks now approximately equals that of the entire year of the past World War.

Rear Adm. Ben Moreell (CEC), USN, Chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks, explains that this success in getting the gigantic construction underway quickly is a result of advance planning in design; of standards developed for layouts with types and plans ready; of a well-trained nucleus organization, capable of rapid expansion; by decentralization and granting of broad authority and responsibility in the field; by the use of cost-plus-fixed-fee type of construction contract; and lastly because of the spirit of loyalty, cooperation, enthusiasm and pride displayed among Navy personnel and private architects, engineers, and contractors and their employees.

Coast Artillery Corps—Four firing batteries of the 263rd Coast Artillery, former South Carolina National Guard regiment, now stationed at Ft. Moultrie, S. C., were awarded "excellent" ratings, while one additional battery received a "very good" as a result of their recently held annual target practices, according to an announcement made last week by Col. Ralph M. Mitchell, commanding officer of the Fourth Coast Artillery District, with headquarters in Atlanta, Ga. The announcement was contained in a letter from Colonel Mitchell to Col. C. D. Peirce, commanding officer of Ft. Moultrie. Ratings are made on the results obtained by the units firing on a moving target towed by a tug several thousand yards at sea.

The units receiving the coveted "excellent" ratings were: Battery "A", from Florence, S. C., commanded by Capt. Burt N. Singleton; and Battery "B", from Dillon, S. C., commanded by Capt. Joe C. Adams; both firing 155-mm guns; Battery "C", from Cheraw, commanded by 1st Lt. Hugh L. Willcox; firing the 10-inch rifles; and Battery "E", from Anderson, S. C., commanded by Capt. Melvin T. Sullivan, which fired the 12-inch mortars. Battery "D", from Greenwood, S. C., also firing a battery of 12-inch mortars, and headed by Capt. Capers L. Peterson, was awarded the "very good" rating.

Field Artillery—Maj. Gen. Robert M. Danford, Chief of Field Artillery, left Washington this week for Louisiana where he will observe the maneuvers between the Second and Third Armies. At the conclusion of the maneuvers, General Danford will proceed to Ft. Sill, Okla., for the purpose of inspecting the activities of the Field Artillery School and Replacement Training Center at the station. While at Ft. Sill, he will also deliver the graduation address to graduates of the first Officer Candidate Course of the Field Artillery School, after which he will return to Washington, expecting to arrive here about 5 Oct., 1941.

Because inaccuracies have been found to exist in the 16-inch semicircular protractor issued to certain field artillery organizations as a component of topographical sets "A" and "B", the Chief of Field Artillery, Maj. Gen. Robert M. Danford, has requested that he be notified of the number of inaccurate protractors now in possession of field artillery units, in order that steps may be taken to effect their replacement.

Signal Corps—Early reports from the Louisiana maneuvers indicate that giant strides in the field of communications, so vital to a swift moving army, have been registered during the past year by the Signal Corps and that complaints because of lack of communications will be far fewer when the history of the current exercises are written. While conditions in the way of field communications are still not as good as Signal Corps officials would like to have them, marked improvement has been made despite the scarcity of trained personnel.

Frequent reports from the maneuver area that units are having more trouble with communications than they would like are admitted by officials in Washington. But at the same time, these officials point out they have been handicapped by lack of funds for years, and that research and development all take time. On the whole these officers say that one of the greatest problems that is being encountered today is the problem of getting commanding officers and commanding generals to use Signal Corps equipment correctly.

Range of most field radios is limited, they point out, in order that radios operating on the same frequency may not interfere with one another. The frequency band is very limited, they say, because of necessity and for the most part, officers other than those attached to the Signal Corps and well aware of the problems encountered in communications, are not familiar with this and similar difficulties. Therefore they use the equipment incorrectly and too frequently adding to the strain on field communications.

The problems encountered in field communications are numerous, officers say, but for the most part they are not too dissatisfied with the progress made. New development carried on with funds supplied since the emergency began are being carried on. Many of these are now nearing the production stage, and they speak of radio trucks from which it is possible to communicate up to 250 miles even while the truck is in motion and other equipment that is easily as startling. They speak of installing push-button receivers and transmitters in armored cars and other vehicles that will make them almost fool-proof for their operating personnel, thus making up for the shortage of highly trained personnel. And what is essentially as important these developments are now entering final stages preparatory to mass production—so far as mass production of radio equipment can go—or have already reached the production stage.

The following units have been constituted by the War Department and will be organized with personnel from detachments of Signal Service Companies, allotted to the Army Air Forces: 851st Sig. Ser. Co., Ava., Windsor Locks, Conn.; 852nd Sig. Ser. Co., Ava., Ft. Geo. Wright, Wash.; 853rd Sig. Co., Ava., MacDill Fld., Fla.; 854th Sig. Ser. Co., Ava., March Fld., Calif.; 855th Sig. Ser. Co., Ava., Chanute Fld., Ill.; 856th Sig. Ser. Co., Ava., Maxwell Fld., Ala.; 857th Sig. Ser. Co., Ava., Randolph Fld., Tex.; 858th Sig. Ser. Co., Ava., Moffett Fld., Calif.; 859th Sig. Ser. Co., Ava., Wright Fld., O.

Assignment to permanent stations of 22 detachments of Signal Service companies to work with the Army Air Corps schools has been announced by the War Department. The activation of these units will not necessitate reduction of grades or ratings of any enlisted men, the announcement said. Trained replacements will be provided from the Signal Corps Replacement Training Center at Ft. Monmouth, N. J., and the required commissioned personnel will be furnished by the Army Air Forces.

The 435th Signal Maintenance Company, Aviation, was activated by the War Department 15 Sept. with permanent station at Langley Field, Va. Seven officers and 149 enlisted men have been authorized and the cadre is being furnished by the 431st Signal Maintenance Company, Aviation, and the 432nd Signal Maintenance Company, Aviation.

Army Air Forces—Air observers believe that current maneuvers have shown that while the United States does not by a long margin possess the largest air force in the world, it does possess what promises to be the best air force, man for man and plane for plane. They say that while it is woefully short numerically, it now hopes to, in some respects, make up for this deficiency in the training of its personnel, even down to the lowest private, and by development of armament and equipment superior to all.

In an effort to show its might, an impressive demonstration was staged this week at Barksdale Field, La., that gave observers tangible evidence of the striking power held by a combine of the Army and Navy Air Forces. Drawing some 45 to 50 Army planes and 18 Navy dive bombers from the Louisiana maneuvers, the bombing demonstration was conducted on obsolete armored cars lined up on the bombing range. Roaring over the target from various altitudes the dive bombers and flying fortresses churned up a reverberating hades for the duration of the exercise. They used bombs ranging from 100 pounds to giant 1,100 pounders, and the wreckage they left in their wake on the pock-marked range gave testimony of the accuracy of the Army bomb sight and the ability of the pilots, gunners, bombers and other crew members of the Army and Navy air forces.

Of a technical nature, one of the most outstanding defects that cropped up during the maneuvers was the lack of landing fields and the Air Force's habit of sticking to high pressure tires slung on low-wheeled landing gears. Competent observers pointed out that during maneuvers, or actual combat, should the planes slip from concrete runways or attempt to land on mud sodden fields the planes would possibly bog down. This is a matter of opinion, of course, and it could easily be overcome by sacrificing a little performance—if this opinion were true—and changing over to larger, lower pressure tires.

The Army, it was learned this week, has recently bought 12 small planes of the popular civilian type for experimental purposes. These small planes, whose success in past maneuvers was mentioned in this column some time ago, according to meager information available will be used for liaison purposes between the Army Air Corps and ground troops. Their slow speed, small size and proven ability "to take it" make them ideal for this purpose. Because the Army doesn't want to talk about these planes yet, it could not be learned whether actual deliveries have been made.

Although the Air Corps refuses comment, it was reported this week that officials of the newly created Army Air Forces are turning considerable attention to the pressing problem of protecting its airdromes against surprise attack by an enemy force. The Army Air Forces is rapidly rounding out a hard-hitting striking force, and it may easily be assumed that for its own protection considerable attention will be given to its airdromes. The ineffectiveness of Britain's defense of its airdromes against parachute troops and surprise attack was demonstrated in Crete, and whether they admit it or not, the Army has learned a lot of lessons from the European war.

Maj. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, Chief of the Army Air Forces, has returned to Washington after a tour of the Panama Canal Zone and observing maneuvers in Louisiana. At the Canal Zone, General Arnold inspected all Air Force establishments and activities in the department, including the permanent airdromes at Albrook, France, and Howard Fields, and the Air Training Center at Rio Hato and other auxiliary landing fields. He was met by Maj. Gen. Frank M. Andrews, Commanding the Caribbean Air Force, Maj. Gen. Davenport Johnson, Brig. Gen. Wallace C. Philo, Cols. A. H. Gilkeson, and F. E. Galloway, and their respective staffs. He also made an official call on the Caribbean Defense Commander, Lt. Gen. Daniel Van Voorhis, at his Quarry Heights headquarters.

Brig. Gen. George E. Stratemeyer, Chief of Training and Operations, Office of the Chief of the Army Air Forces, delivered the principal address at graduation exercises at the Advanced Flying School, Kelly Field, Texas, yesterday. General Stratemeyer told the graduating class that, "I know that you gentlemen have been better trained, that you are more responsible, more serious-minded than older pilots of the Air Corps. You must realize that the wings mean nothing in themselves, that they are merely the outward symbol of the fact that you have been admitted to the greatest fraternity in the world—the flying fraternity."

Keeping ahead of schedules seems to be the practice at Cochran Field, Ga. Continuing this practice of "being a jump ahead" 82 Aviation Cadets are adding to the field's record for finishing work ahead of time. The first class of cadets at the Basic Training School started training three days ahead of schedule and finished the training eight days early. The second class, also started training three days in advance and was expected to complete training on 19 Sept., nine days. Col. D. D. Fitzgerald, Commanding Officer, announced that the cadets had an average of 62 hours air time to their credit as of 12 Sept.

Army Industrial College—Feature of graduation exercises at the Army War College, Monday, 29 Sept., will be an address by Under Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson, who also will award diplomas to the graduates who began Short Course No. 3 in July.

Presentation by the officer students of Problem 17 through 24 and of Problem No. 25 were completed at the College this week. These problems were concerned with Priorities; Strategic and Critical Materials; Factors of Production; Economic Warfare; Economic Surveys of Venezuela, Chile, Western Hemisphere; and Special Situations, problem 25, a review of procurement and economic mobilization. It was announced this week that a new course would begin at the college on 1 Oct.

Quartermaster Corps—The War Department announced this week that the Army Quartermaster School at Schuykill Arsenal, Philadelphia, Pa., is being moved to a location near Petersburg, Va., adjacent to Camp Lee, Va. The transfer is being made because of the expansion of the school's activities. The new site was chosen because of its proximity to the Quartermaster Corps Replacement Training Center at Camp Lee.

A garrison of about 2,500 men, twice the size of the Philadelphia school, will be established at the new station. Transfer of men and equipment will continue until 15 Oct., when the entire movement is expected to be completed. The academic offices of the school will open at Camp Lee at 12:01 A. M., 6 Oct. The new school will occupy a site of 507 acres, where practical exercises will be conducted to supplement classroom instruction, an impossibility at the Philadelphia location.

Lt. Col. George A. Wynne, QMC, has been transferred from Kansas City Quartermaster Depot to the Office of the Quartermaster General, Washington, D. C., where he will be chief of the Requirements and Planning branch, succeeding Lt. Col. H. A. Gardner, QMC, who is now on duty in the Office of the Under Secretary of War.

The Quartermaster Corps is purchasing 7,500,000 chevrons for the shirts, coats, and overcoats of the 57 percent of the Army's enlisted personnel who are entitled to wear them. In order to properly outfit each man privileged to wear them, 16 chevrons are required. Average cost of chevrons range from 4 cents to 11 cents, depending whether they are of wool or of cotton, and of course on the number of stripes.

Chaplains—Chaplain George F. Rixey, executive officer, Office of Chief of Chaplains, left this week for an inspection tour that will take him to Ft. Leavenworth, Kans.; Ft. Leonard Wood, Mo.; Jefferson Barracks, Mo.; Scott Field, Ill.; and Chanute Field, Ill. Chaplain Rixey will also attend the annual Missouri Conference of Methodist Churches at Brookfield, Mo.

Nurse Corps—Examinations for promotion to the grade of chief nurse will be given on or about 1 Oct., to 28 regular Army nurses and to 50 reserves. These 78 nurses, privileged to take the examination because of their proven administrative ability, will be appointed as chief nurses immediately, providing, of course, that they pass the forthcoming examination. The examination, compiled in the office of the Superintendent of Nurses, Washington, D. C., will be composed of 10 questions concerning administrative procedure. The examinations will be sent out from that office in sealed envelopes to either Nurse Corps officers or Medical Corps officers at the various stations, which are located in the corps areas. They will later be returned to Washington by registered mail for grading by a promotion board, whose members are Col. George F. Lull, MC, head of the personnel division, Medical Corps; Maj. Julia O. Flikke, Superintendent of Nurses; Capt. Florence A. Blanchfield and Capt. Pearl C. Fisher, assistant superintendents; and Capt. Lydia M. Keener, principal chief nurse, Walter Reed General Hospital, Washington, D. C.

It was explained this week that although there is authorization for 494 chief nurses, there are at present only 219 chief nurses. Therefore, those who pass this examination, will be promoted immediately, since new nursing facilities are being established and others expanded.

Maj. Julia O. Flikke, Superintendent of Nurses, accompanied by Capt. Pearl C. Fisher, assistant superintendent, this week inspected nursing activities at Ft. Myer, Va., and Bolling Field, D. C.

Naval Chapels Built

To replace antiquated and overcrowded chapel facilities at the Naval Operating Base, Norfolk, Va., two modern chapels—one for Catholics and the other for use by those of Protestant faiths,—are under construction and will be ready for occupancy this fall, according to officials of the Fifth Naval District.

The new edifices will replace two old structures that have served as chapels at the Norfolk Base since World War days. A chapel with a seating capacity of 85 has been utilized by the Protestant chaplain, while Catholic chaplains have made use of a Red Cross building in which they now conduct services.

The new chapels, to cost when completed approximately $125,000, will be of Georgian Colonial architecture. The Protestant chapel will have a seating capacity of 600, while the Catholic will accommodate 400. The Protestant Chapel will be named the David Adams Memorial Chapel in memory of David Phineas Adams, one of the most famous chaplains of early Navy history, who at different times commanded the Ship Atlantic, the Brig. Georgiana and the Waller Sir Andrew Hunter. Chaplain Adams made the first survey ever recorded of the Galapagos Islands; taught Midshipman Farragut mathematics and navigation, and in 1812 was ordered as officer-in-charge of the first Naval School for Midshipmen to be established by Navy Department. In 1816, Chaplain Andrews made surveys of the entrance of the Chesapeake Bay upon which the defense of the Chesapeake was based, and with Stephen Decatur, he laid out the defenses of the lower Chesapeake Bay and recommended the sites for Naval activities on the James and York Rivers.

Navy Defense Bond Sales

As the Navy defense bonds and stamps sale nears the end of the first month, plans calling for the expansion of this sale to include Navy Yards throughout continental United States in the campaign early in October were announced by Rear Adm. Charles C. Conard, USNR, and Comdr. Gerald A. Eubank, USNR, charged with the execution of the campaign.

Studying procedure in the bonds and stamps sale, 24 ensigns, recent graduates of the Supply School at Harvard University, Cambridge, Mass., were at the Navy Department, Washington, D. C., this week. These officers will be later sent to all of the Navy Districts in the United States, where they will act as issuing agent and certifying officer for the campaign in each locale. Each Navy Yard will have one of these officers, while some District Headquarters and some large Naval Air Station will also have an issuing agent and certifying officer.

Ens. C. D. Tandy, USNR, who is issuing agent and certifying officer at the Navy Department, Washington, D. C., reports that participation of officer and civilian personnel is more than twice as much for the pay period of 23 Sept. as was recorded during the 8 Sept. pay period. Ens. Tandy explained that group agents have now become familiarized with the conduct of the campaign, and have thus been better able to present to employees the advantages of purchasing bonds and stamps.

three sub-sections, a test and engineering unit, a communications unit and a clothing and equipment unit. This test section is charged with the determination of the required military characteristics of vehicles, weapons, clothing and equipment of all kinds pertaining to Armored Force units with a view to improvement of existing types and the development of improved types. To carry out this broad function the section also is charged with the testing of all such materiel and the supervision of service testing of such material by Armored Force units.

To illustrate the broad scope of the board's work, the following partial list of tests completed or in process of completion is illuminating: Gasoline and lubricating oils, compasses, tires, fire fighting agents and equipment, radios and other communication equipment, cipher devices, gas masks, flame throwers, first aid kits, flares, helmets, goggles, dust respirators, boots, winter clothing, water cans, gasoline drums, mounting of machine guns and other weapons on vehicles for antiaircraft and anti-tank defense of units, including trains, and all types of vehicles including tanks, half-tracks, armored cars, motorcycles, and trucks.

Most tests, of course, are continuing. For example, until the end of its existence the Armored Force Board probably will be engaged in tests of gasolines and oils, and of each new compass or tire which comes on the market or which seems to offer improved features over current equipment.

The present membership of the Armored Force Board, includes, in addition to the president and section chiefs named above, the following officers: Tactical Section: Lt. Col. Gerald B. It has been mutually agreed that demands of security can be met and a reasonable degree of information released to the public if each ship be considered individually and all releases be subject to the following specific restrictions:

(a) That mention of a ship's presence in any port will be withheld until that information is released by the Navy Department. In no case will the release be made until seven days after arrival.

(b) That nothing shall be published which might indicate the probable length of stay, and in particular no mention or speculation as to date of departure or future movements.

(c) That any damage a ship may have received shall not be disclosed.

FOREIGN MILITARY NEWS-DIGEST

Militärwochenblatt, 27 June 1941.—The Battle of the Atlantic. In the weekly editorial written under the title Germany's War of Liberation, the author compares the British Naval situation of the present with that of 1917. He states that British hopes, which persist in expectation of successes based on some new method of defense, continue to be confronted with the unrelenting machinery of destruction. Omitting losses caused by mines, the total amount of shipping sunk approximates 12,000,000 tons, a figure that equals practically the toll taken by German submarines during the World War and which the British at that time considered a vital threat. It would be sound judgment to infer that Great Britain today occupies a more unfavorable position than she did in 1917, the worst year of the war. At that time the shipping resources of the neutral states were at her disposal. In 1918 she could have confiscated the Dutch and Scandinavian fleets. Today such reserves no longer exist. Shipping which might be supplied by the United States already is operating under the British flag, and that which is under construction is not being completed in sufficient quantity to replace what has been sunk during the past two months. During the World War work in the British shipyards continued at full force. Today, however, German aerial attacks have harassed operations to such an extent that production has been greatly decreased. In 1917 the amount of shipping sunk averaged 550,000 tons per month, while during the first five months of 1941 the monthly average approximated 730,000 tons. In 1919 Churchill, writing in the Sunday Pictorial, acknowledged that in 1917 the fate of England had hung by a fine thread. Today the British shipping losses are considerably greater than they were at that time.

Militärwochenblatt, 4 July 1941.—U. S. S. R. Mobilization. The usually weekly editorial under the caption Germany's War of Liberation comments on Russia's preparation for war against Germany. It appears that the Soviet Union moved with great secrecy to mass the bulk of her army in the Bialystok and Lemberg areas, thereby presenting a severe threat to German security. The Germans believe that it is definitely established that on 1 May 1941 the Russians had mobilized 118 infantry divisions, 20 cavalry divisions and 40 motorized and armored brigades. In massing these forces particular attention was given to East Prussia. This locality was to be opposed from the east and southeast alone by 4 armies consisting of 49 infantry divisions, 3 armored divisions, 12 armored brigades and 7 cavalry divisions.

The Modern Aspect of Operating in Interior and Exterior Lines. By General Ludwig. The successes of Napoleon in operating on interior lines, his capacity for exploiting this strategical concept to the end of defeating the separated hostile forces in detail, inclined Clausewitz toward favoring the operation on interior lines as the stronger method of combat. In its successful application the basic principle necessitated the defeat of one of the separated forces before the other was able to attack. Nevertheless Clausewitz had not overlooked the fact that the operation on interior lines was directed less toward the destruction of the hostile force than that which was employed concentrically on exterior lines. His concern was in the interest of victory and, in that respect, was entirely within the spirit of the time. It must not be overlooked that at that time cavalry was available as a mobile force, capable of being employed in pursuit. An energetic use of this force, even in the frontal attack, presented possibilities of annihilating effect. Military history, however, bears out the fact that this goal was seldom achieved. In his operations on interior lines in 1813 and 1814, Napoleon actually attained no decisive successes. At Leipzig he conducted his operation on interior lines, but the spaces between the hostile forces were insufficient to enable him to secure a decisive victory.

As weapons continued to become more effective, the difficulties of the operation on interior lines increased when the space factor between the separated hostile forces was not very great. Eventually it became impossible to attain decisive results within a single day. Similarly, for the same reason, the employment of cavalry in the pursuit became less effective. Following a short withdrawal from action, the defeated enemy lost no time in organizing a new battle position and launching a counterattack against which the battle efficiency of the cavalry was too exhausted to be effective. Under these circumstances, as the prerequisite of success in the battle of annihilation, it became necessary to employ the encircling movement and the operation on exterior lines.

Moltke recognized this principle immediately. Eliminating complicated details he directed his movements on the battlefield toward the concentric attack. With the development of more effective fire, Schlieffen went a step farther and set as his objective the strategic encirclement of the entire hostile front, a grand operation in which the individual decisive achievements of battle were but single factors which contributed to the success as a whole.

The panoramic aspect of the World War indicates that the operation on interior lines greatly favored Germany. She was conducting a war on two fronts against tremendous forces. In order to achieve victory she was forced to exploit her position as the possessor of the interior by moving her troops from one theatre of operations to another. In this respect it should be noted that railroads are a decisive factor in supporting operations conducted on interior lines, an advantage that was denied the opponent in any attempt to support the Russian front.

During the period subsequent to the World War further improvements were developed in the construction and employment of weapons. The employment of the motor vehicle brought about a technique of movement with capabilities that had never been realized before. Whether the latter will favor the operation on interior lines, or one conducted on exterior lines, is a subject which is open to conjecture. Perhaps the greater flexibility of movement will give a tactical advantage to the former, and a strategical advantage to the latter. The greater flexibility of movement makes it possible to develop frontal successes into a complete annihilation of the hostile force by effective means of surprise employed on the part of the mobile force and the air arm.

The present war, on the whole, is an operation on interior lines. Once again the war opened with the threat both in the east and the west, and again Germany decided to make its main effort against one opponent while keeping the other occupied with a holding force until victory on the one front justified the rapid movement of its forces on interior lines. This time the first decision was gained in the east as a result of the concentric attack. Meanwhile the enemy in the west looked on and did nothing. Despite previous promises he was unable to extend assistance to the east in any operation on exterior lines. With foresight he might have initiated an immediate and powerful attack against the Westwall, which at that time was still weakly garrisoned. Every effort was made to overcome the inherent weaknesses of our interior lines without which success in the east would have been impossible. These weaknesses were offset by the respect with which they were held by the enemy, an attitude which military history might some day regard as the fundamental error in the conduct of their operations. They hesitated to make the necessary sacrifices which an attack against the Westwall would entail, because they believed that the war could have been won by means of the blockade. Instead of seizing the advantages of an operation on exterior lines, they accepted its disadvantages.

Germany has made constant effort to avoid becoming involved in stabilized warfare and, in her war against England, to exploit the advantages of exterior lines as an introductory phase to the concentric attack. The advantages of interior lines enabled her to extend her operations to the southeast and into North Africa with greater speed than might have been accomplished by the British, who are forced to use the more or less circuitous highways of the sea.

The future will teach how the Axis Powers will continue to make use of the advantageous situation afforded by interior lines in their war against Soviet-Russia. Under the present circumstances operations on exterior lines are a decided disadvantage to our opponent. The German field commander will be justified in adhering to no fixed rule. He will exploit the advantages of interior lines and exterior lines according to their respective merits.

Militärwochenblatt, 11 July 1941.—The Technical Capacity of the Soviet-Russian Soldier. By General Ludwig. "The bullet is a fool, the bayonet is wise." This proverb of Suworoff is typically Russian. He was hardly conscious of the thought of saving human lives. The Russian could assault fortifications once the intrenchments were filled with the fallen corpses of his comrades. He relies on mass tactics, the ability of the mass to force the individual forward. Within these limitations he always has been a tenacious and unpretentious soldier, with small regard for the preservation of his own life. His strongly developed religious philosophy caused him to look upon death as the threshold to a better future. More so than in other armies his capabilities were always dependent upon those of his superiors. It is a difficult problem to train him to rely on his own initiative.

In his understanding of modern techniques the Russian soldier is a slow thinker; primarily he lacks training. As a rule he belongs to the peasant class, a social group that has been largely concerned with earning its daily bread. The skilled laborer is utilized in the arms industry. It is only during recent years that the Russian worker has learned anything about the use of modern technical machinery, the operation of which is still limited to the minority. He has great skill in the use of simple hand tools, with which he has made practically everything that he requires for his existence.

In order to reach her political objective which was to be realized by means of the world revolution, Russia strove to make great strides in the technical fields and exerted an effort which far exceeded her capacity. A more moderate but organized development would have assured greater success, but that was too slow for her political ideology. As a result of Soviet action the great leaders in the Russian technical field had been practically exterminated; so, in order to train new engineers and skilled workers, Russia imported a large number of foreign experts. Despite the curtailing of time devoted to apprenticeship—a limitation which affected the quality of workmanship and was responsible for numerous reverses—some progress was eventually attained.

In the technical development of her army Russia took advantage of the experiences of other nations and borrowed many foreign ideas. The systematic development of her national industries and army was not initiated, however, until 1928 when she launched her five-year plan. She laid special emphasis on the development of the air force and the armored weapons. The war in Spain indicated that she was making noticeable progress in this direction. By August, 1941, she was to have attained sufficient progress to warrant her entry into a war against what she hoped would be a weakened Germany. It is somewhat questionable, however, whether the Russian soldier possesses the technical capacity required to employ his arms and equipment and to keep them in serviceable condition. We know that in Soviet-Russia a vast amount of modern machinery has become unserviceable within a very short period of time. Under the co-operative system she acquired a number of tractors and other types of machinery. The Russian peasant having become accustomed to providing merely for his immediate needs is only too willing to rely on the industry of his comrades. To be sure, machinery did improve the conditions of labor, and a great number learned how to use them, but to maintain them in serviceable condition—that was a difficult matter. Repair shops were insufficient. Consequently the life of the machinery was shortened.

It must be assumed that similar conditions will prevail in the army inasmuch as the mass of skilled workers cannot be pressed into the military service if preparations are to be continued. Such difficulties will continue to crop out as the more motorized weapons are employed and the longer the war lasts.

Reports on the war up to the present have indicated that the war of modern combat forces is not a war conducted by the masses, but a war which is based on leadership and the initiative of the individual soldier. An army which but a few years ago disposed of 70 percent of its officers of war experience, in order to afford greater security to the leaders of the party, is incapable today of producing great leadership.

an expert swimmer and diver, volunteered to dive under the ship to see if the body was held by the bilge keels. The captain consented and the diving search was made but the body could not be found. For this he was commended by the Secretary of the Navy.

At the outbreak of the World War, Captain Tomb, then a Lieutenant Commander, was Executive Officer of the USS Louisiana, and from that ship was ordered to command the USS Maumee which was engaged in refueling destroyers in mid-Atlantic. After a few months in this duty he was transferred to the command of the USS Davis, a destroyer operating from Queenstown, performing splendid services for which he was awarded the Navy Cross.

In 1926, Captain Tomb was retired from active service at his own request, and was making his home at Beverly Hills, Calif., at the time of his death.

Surviving him are his widow, Mrs. W. V. Tomb, a daughter, Mrs. Gordon A. Uehling, and his brother, Capt. J. H. Tomb, USN-Ret.

Brig. Gen. Charles M. Bundel, USA-Ret., died at his home, the Maurice Hotel, San Francisco, Calif., Monday evening, 15 Sept., 1941.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Enid Valentine Bundel of San Francisco.

General Bundel was born at Sharon, Pennsylvania, 2 June 1875, and graduated from the United States Military Academy, West Point, New York, in 1899. He rose through the various grades to become a brigadier general in 1934 and was retired for age in 1939. At the time of his retirement he was Commandant of the Command and General Staff School, Fort Leavenworth, Kansas.

Honor graduate of the Army School of the Line in 1916, and a graduate of the General Staff School in 1921 and the Army War College in 1925, General Bundel was known as one of the Army's outstanding officers and was the author of two technical books on military subjects.

He had been stationed at San Francisco from 1912 to 1914, and accompanied the Punitive Expedition into Mexico in 1916. He went to France as a colonel of the National Army in September, 1918, and served with the Army of Occupation in Germany until July 1919.

Funeral services for Maj. Oliver P. Gothlin, Jr., U. S. Army-Ret., who died on 21 Sept., at his home in Arlington, Va., were held at 11:00 a.m. Tuesday 13 Sept., in the Fort Myer Chapel. Chaplain J. W. C. Linsley officiated. Interment was with full military honors in Section 8 of Arlington National Cemetery.

The following officers served as honorary pallbearers: Lt. Col. Joseph A. Wilson, AC; Lt. Col. Stanley J. Grogan, Inf.; Lt. Col. J. E. Upston, AC; Lt. Col. Wallace G. Smith, AC; Lt. Col. R. H. Magee, AC; Maj. J. G. Hopkins, AC; Maj. Thurston H. Baxter, AC, and Maj. Frank F. Everest, Jr., AC.

Major Gothlin is survived by his widow, Mrs. Sarah E. Gothlin, Arlington, Va.

Major Gothlin was born in Dayton, Ohio, on 14 Feb. 1894. He began his military service at the time of the World War, serving first as a private with Company B, Signal Corps, Ohio National Guard, and in the Aviation Section, Signal Enlisted Reserve Corps, during the period from May 1917 to January 1918, when he was appointed a first lieutenant in the Aviation Section, Signal Officers' Reserve Corps. He continued to serve in this capacity until his acceptance of a commission in the Regular Army as a second lieutenant, Air Service, on 15 Sept. 1920. He was retired on 31 Oct. 1940.

Aid for New Officers

Two projects for the assistance of newly commissioned officers of the Army of the United States are nearing fruition. One looks toward the setting up of a fund by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation from which officers may obtain loans for such purposes as the procurement of initial uniforms and equipment upon entering the service, travel for which they have been ordered but not payed, transportation of dependents, etc. The other would authorize the payment of a uniform allowance to newly commissioned officers.

The RFC loan proposal will be presented to Jesse Jones, administrator of the RFC, within a few days, and inasmuch as he is familiar with the project its approval seems almost assured.

The uniform allowance for newly commissioned officers will require legislation, hence must first go to the Bureau of the Budget for approval. It is understood that the proposal embraces the payment of a flat sum of $150 or $200 to newly commissioned officers for the purpose of outfitting themselves with uniforms and other required equipment.

Unfortunately, there is little chance that either of these relief measures will be cleared in time to be of benefit to the first graduates of the Candidates Schools, most of which will graduate their first classes this week. However, present plans contemplate the graduation of a class each month, so any relief that can be afforded will be timely.

Regulations under which the field ration system will be continued for the Army at large will be published to the service within the next few days, it was learned this week.

The use of the field ration was tried for three months on an experimental basis and was found so successful that its continuance for an indefinite period has been authorized.

A committee of officers representing the Quartermaster General, the Finance Department, and the Assistant Chief of Staff, G-4, studied the problems arising as a result of use of the field ration, and it has been decided that the smaller posts will be permitted to return to the garrison ration since supplies in the small amounts needed may be more advantageously purchased in local markets.

Broaden Service Insurance

Modification of the National Service Life Insurance Act of 1940 to extend coverage to men from the time they file application was asked of Congress this week by Secretary Stimson.

Submitting draft of a bill to Congress, Mr. Stimson said, "The purpose of the proposed legislation is to authorize a person in the military service to obtain National Service Life Insurance effective upon date of application if he submits with such application a valid authorization for the deduction of the premium from his pay."

New Officers' Course

In an effort to train its officers in the operation and maintenance of aircraft warning stations, the Army is taking advantage of facilities offered in the Crift Laboratory, Harvard University, Cambridge, Mass., and Officers of the Signal Corps, Air Corps and Coast Artillery Corps are now being assigned to Crift Laboratory for training. A class of some 105 Signal Corps officers, who were the first assigned to the training, are now nearing completion of the first course.

Allowances in Advance

The Senate Military Affairs Committee this week reported without amendment the bill S. 1843, which would authorize payment in advance of allowances to Army enlisted men ordered to new stations.

Recommending enactment of the bill, the committee said: "Very often an enlisted man reporting for duty on change of station is without funds or has at the most but a very limited amount of private funds at his disposal. In many cases subsistence and quarters in kind are not available and a man in such a position must obtain lodging and board on credit from boarding houses if he is without funds, and for such credit he naturally pays a higher price."

FINANCE

Financial Digest

There were three important financial and economic developments this week, which were directed toward the control of inflation and additional revenue for the Treasury. Higher prices were the goal of the Roosevelt Administration from the time of the first inauguration of the President. Policies toward this end continued until a few months ago when basic prices began to skyrocket, and the need for action became pressing. Anticipating what has occurred, the Federal Reserve Board presented early in the year a comprehensive program to insure price stability, but it was opposed by Secretary Morgenthau, and the President inclined to his viewpoint. A price control administration was established with a New Dealer, Leon Henderson as its Director, and he sought by voluntary piecemeal arrangements to stop the upward price movement. It becoming apparent that this method would not be effective in curbing inflation, the President proposed a price control law, but he failed to insist upon action and there was indifference in Congress to any such enactment largely because of the opposition of the farm and labor blocs.

The surging advance of basic prices during the summer months changed the attitude of the President and Congress. The former is demanding early passage of a drastic bill and Congressional leaders have agreed to action. The House Banking and Currency Committee is closing hearings on the Administration's measure, and promises to report it with modifications about the middle of October. Among the witnesses whose testimony was regarded as of special importance, were Mr. Bernard M. Baruch, Chairman of the War Industries Board during the World War, Mr. Henderson, and Secretary Morgenthau. Mr. Baruch favored blanket ceiling on all components of prices, including wages and farm products. Mr. Henderson argued that Britain's experience shows that wages should be a matter of voluntary agreement. Secretary Morgenthau changed his position and now insists that only bold and effective action can forestall a disastrous inflation, which would penalize every one, especially the farmers. He joined with Henderson in opposition to a ceiling on wages, but thought there should be firm control over the prices of farm products. It is known the President feels with Henderson and Morgenthau that wages should be exempt from control on the ground that while they affect the cost of production and the general level of prices, the causes of demands for increases can be removed by limiting the cost of living and imposing adequate levies on excess taxes.

The Secretary further announced that we must prepare to increase taxes, may have to extend the general control over bank credits, and would certainly have to reduce capital expenditures for non-defense projects. In connection with taxes, he proposed that all corporation profits over 6 per cent on invested capital be taken by the Government during the period of the Emergency. This recommendation recalls that during the early years of the great depression, the New Dealers around the President were suggesting the abolition of the profit system. Mr. Morgenthau does not go that far, but it is evident that if corporation net earnings be restricted to 6 per cent, the large enterprises would consider it a fair return, but the small corporations, many of which do not make 6 per cent, would be driven to the wall, especially since a large proportion of them has been financing their operations on borrowed money from the time the depression began in 1929. Another effect of the profit limit fixed by Mr. Morgenthau would be that even large corporations would be disinclined to proceed with expansion, and again, new enterprises would be still born. So far as the Treasury is concerned, the consequence would be that revenue would be diminished, and confidence in the dollar would decline. It is probable that Mr. Morgenthau made his proposal in order to induce further action with respect to excess profits, and at this session there is little prospect that it will be adopted.

The increase in reserve requirements by the Federal Reserve Board is indicative of the Board's intention to do all it can under the law to prevent inflation. The reserves of the Banks in excess of legal requirements amounted before the board acted to $5.2 billions. As a result of the Board's order, they will amount to $4 billions, which would enable a tremendous expansion of credit. Thus, what the Board has done is more symbolic than effective. It is a step in the right direction, but it does not alter to any appreciable extent the prospect for inflation.

Rural Power and Defense

Importance to the national defense of adequate amounts of electric power in rural areas was stressed in an article by Harry Slattery, administrator of the Rural Electrification Administration, printed in Public Utilities Fortnightly and reprinted this week in the Congressional Record at the suggestion of Senator Kenneth McKellar, of Tenn.

Mr. Slattery called attention to the fact that both Germany and Great Britain had subsidized rural electrification in the interests of national defense. In 1937, said Mr. Slattery, sealed crates were delivered to electrified farms all over Germany. These crates were said to contain machinery for manufacturing toys, but were not to be opened until notice. The day the Nazis marched on Poland, orders were given to open the crates, which were found to contain equipment with which could be manufactured on the farms the thousands of little parts which go into modern war weapons.

Turning to America, Mr. Slattery stated that electrification of farms makes possible the use of labor saving machinery which increases production and largely makes up for shortage of farm labor. "It has been estimated," the REA administrator wrote, "that the application of electric power to the activities of the average farm will provide the equivalent of one farm hand at an investment of less than the annual wages of a farm laborer."

Moreover, continued Mr. Slattery, "REA-financed systems have been called on to serve a great variety of defense projects, including camps, bases, forts, munitions depots and dumps, housing projects, air field beacons, radio beam stations and many lesser loads related directly to the defense program."

"In a number of instances, such as at Camp Shelby, Miss., Ft. Leonard Wood, Missouri, and Camp Forrest, Tenn., REA-financed cooperatives have been in a position to make service available to Army camps promptly and at low cost."

Also, said Mr. Slattery, the cooperatives have furnished power for the commercial establishments, homes and recreational areas which grow up about camps and defense installations. Rural electric power has also led to the development of a large number and variety of small, decentralized industrial enterprises which "make possible the full utilization of facilities and manpower through 'farming out' with the least possible migration of workers."

General Robertson Transferred

The War Department this week announced the transfer of Brig. Gen. Ralph K. Robertson from duty with the 44th Division, Ft. Dix, N. J., to the Second Corps Area Service Command, at headquarters of the Second Corps Area, Governors Island, N. Y. General Robertson, an officer of the New York National Guard, has been in command of the 87th Infantry Brigade of the 44th Division.

General Robertson was born in New York on 24 April 1883. He was graduated from Cornell University with the degrees of Bachelor of Arts, 1904, and Bachelor of Laws, 1906. He has served in the New York National Guard since 1906.

Today—"Liberty Fleet Day"—14 new ships will be launched in various United States ports to mark the moving of America's shipbuilding program into high gear.

To mark the day, three governors and a number of mayors have proclaimed "Liberty Fleet Day." Shipyards will be open to the public. Last night, over a National Broadcasting Company network, Rear Adm. Emory S. Land, USN-Ret., Maritime Commission chairman; Maj. Gen. Edmund B. Gregory, the Quartermaster General, and Rear Adm. S. M. Robinson, USN, Chief of the Bureau of Ships, called attention to the progress made in shipbuilding, with construction times cut far below the records made in World War days.

Today, a transcribed message from President Roosevelt will be broadcast in each shipyard where launchings will take place.

Today is a red-letter day for the Quartermaster Corps especially, for one of the 14 ships to be launched is the Army transport Frederick Funston, contract for which was placed 30 Sept. 1940 with Seattle-Tacoma Shipbuilding Company, Seattle, Wash. The Frederick Funston is the only vessel to be built especially as an Army transport. A sister transport building at the Seattle yard is scheduled for launching in the near future.

Said General Gregory of the launching, "Representing the Army of the United States, I am proud to take part in celebrating this day. As the Quartermaster General of the Army, I am especially gratified to know that one of these ships, the Frederick Funston, is to go into Army service, there to be operated by the Quartermaster Corps whose function it is to supply and transport the Army. Vitally important to national security is an adequate system of water transportation. America's outlying bases are now the far-flung sentinels of Democracy. If they are to be truly effective, a chain of ships must be welded to link them to the mainland."

Three other of the 14 ships are the first of the 312 Liberty Ships now building, to be operated by the government. They are the Patrick Henry, building at Baltimore; the Star of Oregon, building at Portland, and the John C. Fremont, building at Los Angeles harbor.

Two ships are building for the British government, at Richmond, Calif., the Ocean Venture and the Ocean Voice.

One C-3 passenger-cargo ship, the African Planet, will be launched at Pascagoula, Miss.

A tanker, the Sinclair Superfine, will take the water at Quincy, Mass.

Finally, six regular program cargo vessels will be launched—the Surprise, at Chester; the James McKay, at Baltimore; the Alcon Polaris, at Los Angeles; the Louise Lykes, at Kearney; the Steel Artisan, at San Francisco, and the Adabelle Lykes, at Wilmington, Del.

Other Construction
A corporation financed by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation is being organized to construct the "Sea Otters," new design, gasoline-driven cargo ships, which some government officials believe may result in a literal "bridge of ships."

Members of the board of directors will include Secretary of the Navy Knox, Maritime Commission Chairman Land, J. W. Powell, special Navy Department shipbuilding assistant; E. B. Germain, president and general manager, and a representative of the RFC.

The ships will be built along the Mississippi River and other inland waters and will be assigned to the Lend-Lease agency.

The Sea Otters will be about 270 feet in length, will displace 1900 tons, will be propelled by 16 or more gasoline motors rotating a propeller set aft of midships.

Contract for nine small bulk cargo ships has been awarded by the Maritime Commission to Penn-Jersey SB Corp., Camden, N. J., at an estimated cost of $800,000 for each vessel. The vessels are about the same size as the "coasters" recently ordered by the commission.

Seven bids were received 23 Sept. for construction of 1850 185-foot seagoing diesel tugs.

Gen. Hagood's Statement

Maj. Gen. Johnson Hagood, USA-Ret., who was in Washington this week, issued a statement denying that he has ever been a member of the America First Committee and saying that his name had been appended to one of their statements through a misunderstanding. He said that he had offered his services to the President several months ago. His statement follows:

"Through a misunderstanding, my name was included with some members of the America First Committee in a public statement on Sunday 14 Sept., to the effect that the President, under the Constitution, could not enter into a shooting war without first getting the authority from Congress. I have withdrawn my name. I wish to make it plain that I have never been a member of the America First Committee, and that I refused to join that or any other group concerned with foreign affairs.

"I am a writer and not a reformer. Whatever I have to say about the National Defense appears under my name in books, and magazine articles.

"Several months ago I offered my services to the President through his Chief of Staff and Secretary of War, and indicated my willingness to serve in any capacity without regard to my present rank or former position in the army. That offer still stands."

Pay Regulation Disputed

The Comptroller General has notified Secretary of War Stimson that his office would not follow the Court of Claims decision in the case of Col. William C. Koenig, vs. the United States regarding the settlement of accounts and claims. Col. Koenig's claim that an officer of stated rank is given the right to receive the full amount of base pay, pay for length of service, and allowances for subsistence and rental of quarters so long as the total of all these items for the year does not exceed the maximum fixed in the statute, and without reference to the daily limitation of $20 a day set by the Comptroller General was upheld by the Court of Claims, whose decision the Comptroller General refused to recognize.

Therefore, Maj. Gen. H. K. Loughry, Chief of Finance, has instructed disbursing officers to continue to compute the allowances of officers involved as heretofore, and that they should advise any officer who feels that he has a claim similar to that of Col. Koenig that his only redress under present circumstances is to file a claim therefor with the Court of Claims of the United States.

It is to be recalled that Sec. 7 of the Act of 10 June, 1922, places a limitation of $7200 as the maximum annual pay and allowances of officers below the grade of brigadier general. The Comptroller General, in 1929, set out the basis for the calculation of this maximum limitation, holding it to require a daily limitation of $20 or a monthly limitation of $600, which the Court of Claims nullified in its decision in the case of Col. Koenig vs. the United States.

Army Warrant Officers

Regulations are nearing completion setting up the qualifications and standards for the various categories of Army warrant officers to be established under the new law.

It is likely that these new standards will be issued to the service in about two weeks. However, examinations for appointment of warrant officers (junior grade) under the new system probably will not be scheduled until after the first of the year. This period of time is being allowed so as to permit prospective candidates to prepare themselves in the subjects to be specified in the new regulations.

Meanwhile, enlisted men whose names are carried on the current eligible list are being examined physically. Those who successfully pass the physical examination and who are recommended by their commanding officers will be appointed warrant officers (junior grade) as of 1 Oct.

It is contemplated that all appointments, even the so-called permanent ones, will be on a probationary basis similar to the three-year probationary appointments given newly commissioned officers of the regular Army.

Present Warrant Officers, including warrant officer bandleaders, who have the required 10 years service in grade, will be promoted to be Chief Warrant Officers, under the new law.

Steps already have been taken to amend existing regulations concerning physical standards for warrant officers so as to include the two grades, warrant officer (junior grade) and chief warrant officer. No major changes in physical standards are contemplated. However, new regulations probably will include a provision permitting the designation of warrant officers as property accountable officers—a function heretofore confined to commissioned officers.

It is not considered likely that there will be any changes in the uniform for warrant officers, but there will be some provision made for distinctive insignia to designate the two new grades of warrant officers.

No decision has yet been reached as to the numbers to be appointed, but it is said that appointments will be made, both permanent and temporary, to fill the actual needs of the Army rather than to reach the maximum authorized under the law. Permanent needs of the Regular Army will not be met by immediate appointment of authorized strength in permanent appointments. Rather, the Department will meet the requirements by some permanent and some temporary appointments, spreading the number of permanent appointments over a period of years in order to avoid a promotion "hump" such as occurred in the commissioned grades following the world war.

Huge Motor Convoy Travels

The largest "all rubber" convoy movement in the Army's history was accomplished this week when the 28th Division, commanded by Maj. Gen. Edward Martin, left Indianant Gap, Pa., for its maneuver area near Lilesville, N. C.

Supplementing the 2,320 trucks and passenger cars which are attached to the division, were 74 large commercial buses and 70 vans, hired for this experiment in military transport. The buses transported 2,460 men, while 18,000 travelled in Army vehicles. Packs, barracks bags, rifles, and side arms went along in the buses so that the soldiers would be ready for action the moment they stopped. Heavier equipment such as extra bedding, tents, and ammunition was carried in the accompanying vans.

The Division carried facilities for cooking on the move and messed at convenient stops along the route. The morning and evening meals were served hot, while the midday mess consisted of a pack lunch. The movement, a distance of 530 miles, took 2½ days to accomplish, and was made over three separate routes.

Moffett Field Griders Ambitious

If prospective material be a criterion, the Moffett Field, Calif., football team should go places this season, what with many college grid greats and two players from the professional Detroit Lions making up the roster of the squad. A schedule of ten games has been lined up for the Moffett Field eleven, which will point most for the 11 Nov. games with the squad from the 12th Naval District, in what may well be a revival of the West Coast Army-Navy Game.

Other games will be played against Chico State, Camp Haan, Ft. Ord, San Luis Obispo, St. Mary's College, University of California, San Francisco State College, the University of San Francisco, and San Jose State, highest scoring team in the nation two years ago, and only once defeated in three years.

Congressmen Praise Maneuvers

From two Congressmen this week came praise of the morale and efficiency of the armed forces now engaged in maneuvers.

Speaking on the floor of the House, on 22 Sept., Representative Allen, of La., declared, "Let me tell you very frankly that the morale of the men is good. It is a whole lot better than most of us have been led to believe. . . . I want to say a word about the cause of the bad morale that may exist, although it is little. It is my belief that civilians themselves are largely responsible for whatever bad morale may exist. These soldiers come from your home districts. They have the same likes and dislikes the folks back home have. When they hear reports about the fellows back home making a lot of money . . . they naturally would like to be back home to make some of this money."

"These boys in the Army are getting tough," Congressman Allen continued. "You are going to find that these fellows will be as tough as the soldiers of other years. . . . We now have a great Army as far as that goes. We need more equipment, but we already have a fine Army."

The following day, Representative J. Buell Snyder, of Pa., told the Congress that he had observed the maneuvers for two days and two nights, in company with Representatives Terry, of Ark.; Starnes, of Ala., and Mahon, of Texas.

"It is unfortunate indeed," he said, "that all of the people in the United States over the age of 14 could not see this wonderful demonstration of our national defense equipment and the men handling it in the State of Louisiana at this time. We saw an Army of 500,000 men in action, the best clothed, the best fed, and the best disciplined army in the world, with the best morale of any army that ever trod the soil."

NBC "Adopts" Army Station

Quarry Heights, C. Z.—At 7:30 on the evening of Thursday, 11 Sept., a very significant event transpired in the Panama Coast Artillery Command. In a special inaugural program, coordinated between Radio City, New York, and the Panama Canal Zone Headquarters, the National Broadcasting Company formally "adopted" the Coast Artillery stations "PCAN" and "PCAC" as "affiliates" of the great National Broadcasting Company's system. Since these two stations are devoted exclusively to the entertainment of soldiers in the Canal Zone and operated by the personnel of the Panama Coast Artillery Command, under Maj. Gen. William E. Shedd; there are no commercial considerations involved. This step represents the generous cooperation of the NBC system through its New York Staff, headed by Mr. C. Lloyd Egner as executive vice-president.

At the appointed time, the guests who were to appear on the inaugural broadcast were assembled in the two studios; one in the heart of downtown New York and the other on the edge of the dense tropical jungles of Panama. The celebrated radio comedians, "Ralph and Budd" acted jointly as Masters-of-Ceremony in New York, introducing not only their own inimitable witticisms but also presenting Mr. Niles Trammel, the President of NBC, then Mr. Lloyd Egner, as executive vice-president, and Miss Gertrude Lawrence of NBC. They are all staunch friends previously well known to the Panama Coast Artillerymen through friendly contributions to their little Service paper, the "Panama Coast Artillery News." In addition, Maj. Gen. Sanderford Jarman had flown to New York from his command at Camp Stewart in Georgia, for the special purpose of thus greeting the soldiers in his recent former command, the Panama Coast Artillery.

From the Panama end, Master Sergeant Clay Doster, editor of the Panama Coast Artillery News, introduced his Commander, Maj. Gen. William E. Shedd, and Governor Edgerton of the Panama Canal, who each addressed a message of thanks to the officials of NBC who had so generously devoted themselves to the welfare of these jungle-bound soldier defenders of our "National Lifeline."

The program was then rebroadcast over the world wide hook-up of NBC that same evening. This had been the first occasion for quite some time in which the Panama Canal Department has been the subject of such a widely disseminated program. It was heard throughout the world as testified by the many favorable comments which have already been received.

And so were launched the two "powerful little 50 watters," PCAN and PCAC, as the adopted step children of NBC. From now on the Coast Artillerymen will receive a regular consignment of recorded programs from New York, for rebroadcast over their own stations, for their own exclusive entertainment here during the long tropical evenings in isolated little anti-aircraft battery positions located far back over muddy trails in the jungle wilderness.

Changing Tents to "Hutments"

An experiment to determine the advisability of changing tents to "hutments" will be conducted at Ft. Jackson, S. C. Tent frames in the entire area occupied by the 128th Field Artillery will be transformed by the Construction Division, Office of the Quartermaster General, in a test to determine cost and suitability of the new type of living quarters as compared to tents.

The term "Hutment" means a solid sheathed roof with a two by four bracing placed over the standard tent frame. Two sections of the screen wire will be replaced by plastic screen, which is weatherproof, but which admits sunlight. Over the other sections of screen wire, hinged plywood shutters will be installed.

Also included in the Hutment construction will be the revision of the present electrical system and the installation of new doors. The roof frame, completely sheathed, will be built in the Constructing Quartermaster's yard in a mass line production manner and trucked to the construction area to be assembled over the present frame.

After the roof frame is bolted into place, a composite shingle roof will be added. This roof will have a six-inch metal striping used as a crown and ridge row.

The standard tent is built with a wood frame enclosed in screen wire, with canvas roof and sides.

Letters to the EditorWarrant Officers' Exams

Editor, ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL

In a recent issue of ARMY AND NAVY I read a published letter, which was written to you in connection with the pending Warrant Officer increase in the Army. May I quote my opinions in reply to this letter?

First, I should like to see the grade "Warrant Officer" continued "for well deserving enlisted men of the Army" as was intended in the spirit of the law which created it;

Secondly, Reserve Officers, now serving tours of active duty, who were enlisted men of the Army prior to being called to active duty as reserve officers, should have nothing to fear through competitive examination with other enlisted men, since it is believed by the writer that the efficiency of an officer should not be less than that of an enlisted man;

Thirdly, There were numerous non-commissioned officers whose ages barred them from serving as reserve officers; who were classed as "key men" in their departments; and, who were urgently needed at their present assignments to preserve harmony in the organic setup with which they were functioning;

Finally, If the best material for the grade is to be secured, let's hope the grade is continued to be a competitive reward. Let's "Keep 'Em Flying" and "Keep 'Em Trying."

Yours for a great magazine for our armed forces,

Mr. Sgt., QM Corps.

• Actual color photograph—F. H. Lewis looks over some fine, light tobacco, before aging.

"Want this in your cigarette?"

"Then smoke Luckies!" says F. H. Lewis, independent tobacco warehouseman of Stoneville, N. C., "because Luckies pay the price to get milder, better-tastin' leaf like this."

BELIEVE me—fine, mild, light tobacco like this costs real money. But that's the kind Luckies go after...and pay the price to get.

"I've seen 'em do it at one market after the other, all through the Tobacco Country...so you can bet your boots I smoke Luckies!"

Smokers, that's a pretty good cue—from a man who knows what he's talking about—a man who has spent his life buying, selling and handling tobacco.

Of course you want milder, better-tasting tobaccos in your cigarette—the kind that bring higher prices at the auctions. Next time you step up to a cigarette counter, why not be sure you get these finer tobaccos? Ask for Lucky Strike.

Remember: independent tobacco experts—buyers, auctioneers, warehousemen—smoke Luckies by an overwhelming majority...
